

Apollo 13 Hits Pacific Bull's-eye

ABOARD USS TWO JIMA (AP) — Apollo 13's astronauts blazed back safely to their home planet today in a thrilling climax to America's most perilous space journey. They quickly were hoisted aboard this recovery carrier in apparently good shape.

While an anxious world cheered the end of the flight James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W. Haise Jr. and John L. Swigert Jr. rode their command ship Odyssey to a bull's-eye landing at 1:08 p.m. EST just four miles from this recovery carrier.

A helicopter plucked them from their bobbing spacecraft and deposited them on the deck of the two Jima just 54 minutes after splashdown.

"I feel just fine," commander Lovell, making his fourth and last space flight, reported as the chopper ferried the trio toward the carrier.

The spaceship landed close enough for television cameras aboard the ship and a helicopter to relay dramatic pictures as Odyssey broke through a cloud layer 2,000 feet high. The command module dangled under three huge orange and white parachutes.

Hundreds of sailors on the deck cheered and clapped as the astronauts splashed down in warm, rolling waters.

They cheered again when the helicopter touched on the deck at 1:52 p.m. and Lovell, Haise and Swigert stepped onto a red carpet. The men were bearded, and they walked slowly, steadily as they emerged.

Fleet commander Adm. Donald Davis welcomed them aboard with, "We're glad you made it boys."

The ship's chaplain offered a prayer which concluded: "We offer a humble thanksgiving for their safe return."

Lovell spoke a few inaudible words to Admiral Davis and to photographers.

Following the welcoming ceremony, all three spacemen went below decks for a medical examination, showers and a hot meal.

They expected within a short time to speak by radiotelephone with President Nixon and with their families.

Nixon sent a message to Mission Control, congratulating it for the skillful manner in which it brought the troubled Apollo 13 back to earth.

"We show you on the screen. You're looking great," Mission Control radioed as relieved officials observed the landing on a large TV screen in the control center.

The safe touchdown was a mighty relief for the millions who watched and worried after trouble developed Monday night. An oxygen tank exploded then ruining the command ship's oxygen and power supplies.

That forced the astronauts to abandon man's third moon landing attempt and to turn to the lunar module systems as they fought for survival for four days.

A helicopter hovered over the bobbing capsule within minutes, and the first frogman was in the water 10 minutes after splashdown.

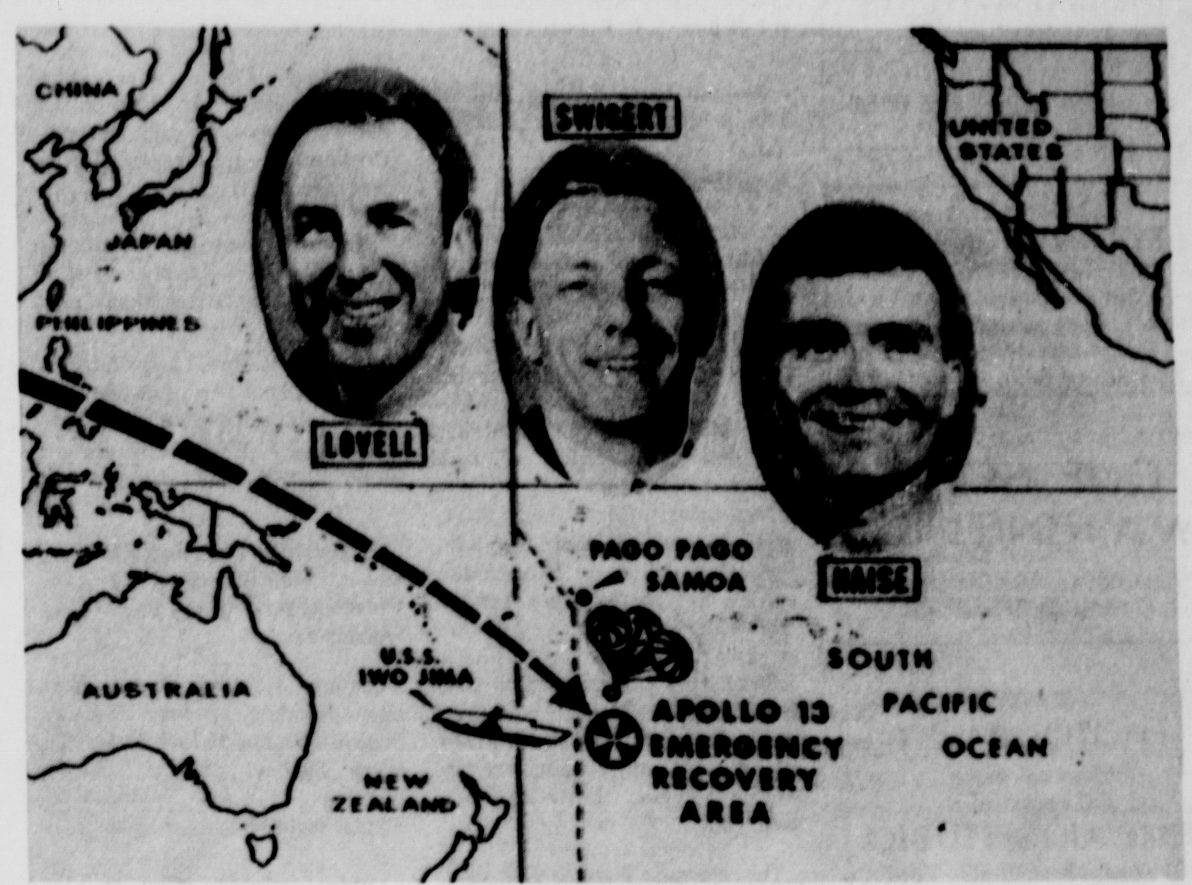

A flotation collar was placed around the spaceship.

Touchdown came after Apollo 13 slammed into the atmosphere 76 miles above the Pacific at 24,636 miles an hour.

The thickening atmosphere blistered the heat shield with temperatures up to 5,000 degrees and quickly slowed the Odyssey. Three 83.5-foot diameter parachutes unfurled at 10,000 feet to drop the craft into warm Pacific waters at 22 m.p.h.

The six-ton command ship Odyssey, disabled most of the journey, was the only section of

BULLETIN

The second bomb threat in as many days was received shortly before 12:30 p.m. Friday at the House of Heavilin School of Beauty in the Brinc Building, which also houses the Pettis County Selective Service Board. According to Fire Chief Emmett Vaughn, the bomb was reported ready to go off at 2 p.m. Occupants of the building were evacuated shortly before the designated hour. Police Chief William Miller said that six local police characters were picked up by police for investigation of making a false emergency call before inspection at the Brinc Building was completed.

Re-election Candidacy For Ryan

Sen. John C. Ryan of Sedalia announced Thursday his candidacy for re-election as state senator of the 28th district on the Republican ticket. Ryan, of Route 3, Walnut Hills, has served one term in the State Senate, where he is a member of the Agriculture,

Sen. John Ryan

Education and Labor and Management Relations Committees.

The 28th District includes Pettis, Lafayette, Linn, Saline, Chariton and Cooper Counties.

Ryan was recently appointed to the Senate Ways and Means Committee, the membership of which is usually reserved to senators with 12 years experience.

The likely opponent of Ryan in the November race will be Ike Skelton, Lexington attorney, who has already filed for the post on the Democratic ticket. The state primary election will be held in August.

A former recorder of deeds in Pettis County, Ryan has lived in Sedalia 35 years. He is associated with Bryant Motor Co., on the board of Missouri State Bank, and is chairman of the board of trustees of Wesley United Methodist Church. Ryan is a Mason, Shriner and Elk.

ABM Rally is Tomorrow

More than a thousand people representing 30 groups from all over the state are expected to attend an anti-ABM rally in Liberty Park beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday, according to William Wickersham, spokesman for the Missouri branch of the Coalition on National Priorities and Military Policy, the group co-ordinating the rally.

The weatherman predicted warmer temperatures Saturday, but added that a 30 per cent chance of rain exists later in the day.

The rally, which was called to protest the proposed deployment of the ABM defensive missile system in the Whiteman Air Force Base area, will feature speakers from various peace and religious groups, a folk singer, telegrams from prominent personalities opposed to ABM, the release of 500 helium-filled balloons, and distribution of fact-sheets and pamphlets.

The release of the balloons is designed to dramatize the effect of fallout, which anti-ABM groups say would be carried all over the state if the missile exploded above the Sedalia area, and the vulnerability of the system to decoys, like aluminum foil balloons, which critics say could foul up the ABM's radar.

Tied to each balloon will be a note stating: "To help us in predicting an ABM fallout pattern, please return this card with your name and address to the Missouri Peace Studies Institute, 813 Maryland, Columbia, Mo."

A Joan Baez-type folk singer from Columbia, Joyous Perrin, will entertain, and several other singers may perform at the rally. An attempt to get a big-name personality didn't pan out, Wickersham said.

The speakers will include: Leonard Tinker, Peace Education secretary for the American Friends Service Committee; Mrs. Robin Culver, of Another Mother For Peace; Rory Ellinger, of the New

Legislature Takes Break To Ponder Money Worry

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Members of the Missouri House and Senate went home for the weekend Thursday—and some until April 27—to mull over the penny pinching budget Gov. Warren E. Hearnes handed them as the special session opened Wednesday.

Members of the House Appropriations Committee got even greater detail on the administration's view of the state's financial crisis.

John C. Vaughn, state comptroller and budget director, provided the bad news he said was caused by defeat of the income tax revision bill at the hands of the voters April 7.

As the governor said earlier, the state should hold expenditures in the coming fiscal year to about $618 million in general revenue funds, some $20 million less than for this year, Vaughn told the committee.

That is because this time the state won't have the one-shot aid of about $49 million in accelerated tax collections. It will mean, Vaughn said, that the budget can provide state agencies and institutions with about the same money they got this year. But public schools will get about $54 million less than they were promised for the coming year and some $19 million less than they got this year.

The appropriations committee will work all next week on hearing the requests of agency heads and institutional directors before preparing its own version of the budget bills for House action.

The Senate Appropriations Committee plans to do the same thing the following week.

Both houses hope to be in session part of the week beginning April 27 but at this point the major problem will be to get the committee work done.

Besides the appropriation bills, house committees also face some 28 other topics submitted by the governor for the special session's attention, among them a broad bill to control the abuse of dangerous drugs and narcotics.

Car Care Section Coming Sunday

Springtime brings on new motoring needs and worries. For many, the coming months signal the start of "vacation season" and the chance to explore the open road.

To keep our readers informed of proper car care techniques and repairs, as well as presenting a vacation plan for every budget, The Democrat-Capital is publishing the annual car care section in Sunday's edition. Watch for it.

Measles Increase Is Noted

In response to the recent increase in cases of rubeola (2-week, hard measles) in city schools, immunization clinics are being set up in Sedalia.

The clinics are being sponsored by Pettis County physicians, the Pettis County Nursing Service, and the Sedalia public schools in cooperation with the Missouri Division of Health. Letters are currently being sent out to all children in grades 1 through 4.

Any parent wishing his school children to receive the measles shot at school must return the permission card to school Monday. No vaccine will be given without a signed permission card.

Mrs. Don Bellmer, assistant county health nurse, said about 25 cases of rubeola have been reported over the last week or so in Sedalia. She emphasized, however, that this does not constitute an epidemic, adding that the purpose of the immunization program is to avert such a possibility.

Any child who is allergic to eggs or feathers, or who has a chronic disease such as tuberculosis, leukemia, or is taking cortisone, should not be given the vaccine, health officials said. If the child has a fever, the vaccine should not be given as well.

Two teams of doctors and

Smith-Cotton Now Has 'Tracer' Plan

Smith-Cotton High School telephones are now covered by a "tracer" device, following a bomb scare Thursday that led to evacuation of the building.

Principal Earl Finley said Southwestern Bell had installed the tracer in an attempt to halt future such threats.

The bomb threat was received by Mrs. Mary Spears, an office secretary around 12:30 p.m. A male voice said, "I have just sent a bomb up there." Vice Principal Morris Byrum was advised, who in turn notified Finley. Finley, who was in the school cafeteria, pulled a fire alarm switch to empty the building.

Moments after the building was evacuated a second call was received, saying the bomb was set to go off at 1:30 p.m.

Police and fire officials were called about 12:40 p.m., and firemen searched the building for the reported bomb to no avail. Students were readmitted about 2 p.m., at which time they searched their individual lockers.

After normal school routine was resumed, Finley addressed the students over the school's public address system, saying "This is a tense time, a particularly tense time in Sedalia," apparently in reference to the ABM protest scheduled for Saturday. He added that the administration "will take all steps possible to safeguard your health."

Jordanians Request U. S. Call Ambassador Home

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Official sources reported today that the Jordanian government asked the United States to remove its ambassador from Amman, apparently because he advised U.S. Asst. Secretary of State Joseph Sisco to cancel his visit to Jordan.

Foreign Minister Abdel Mo-neim Rifai requested the State Department to pull out Ambassador Harrison Matthews Symmes, the sources said, because the government "can find no justification for his attitude and inclination as regards the Arab position in the face of Israeli aggression."

A State Department spokesman in Washington said the department had not received word of the Jordanian action and therefore the department could neither confirm nor deny the reports. There was speculation that the Jordanian ambassador to the United States would deliver the demand to the department during the day.

Sisco, now touring the Middle East, was scheduled to arrive from Israel today to talk with King Hussein. The State Department canceled the visit Thursday, reportedly on Symmes' advice, after Palestinian guerrillas led violent demonstrations for two days in Amman against the United States and Sisco.

Rifai protested Thursday night that the cancellation was "unjustified" because Jordanian security forces were sufficient to protect the American diplomat.

Despite the cancellation of Sisco's visit, demonstrators marched through the streets of Amman again today, carrying banners and shouting slogans against U.S. policy in the Middle East.

Amman was also hit by a general strike, with all shops, banks and business offices closed. Guerrillas, military police and army troops patrolled the streets, and some scattered shooting was heard.

The United States for years has supported Hussein, providing him with military and economic aid in the belief that he is a force for moderation in the Arab world.

Generally considered pro-Western, the king has recently complained that his army has been unable to obtain needed weapons from the United States. He has hinted that he might turn to the Soviet Union to get them.

Administration Thinking Buoyed by GNP Figures

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration's repeated contention that inflation is nearly over has been given new support by seemingly contradictory figures in the most recent Gross National Product report.

Prices continued their four-year climb during January, February and March with an annual rate increase of 5 per cent, the Commerce Department reported Thursday. But at the same time, actual output of goods and services dropped a dramatic 1 1/2 per cent, the steepest decline since the recession of almost a decade ago.

The Federal Reserve Board also reported industrial production climbed slightly in March after seven consecutive months of decline, giving some hope the economy is picking up again after the government-induced slowdown.

"The figures suggest to me that the economy is bottoming or maybe has bottomed," the Commerce Department's chief economist, Asst. Secretary Harold C. Passer, said.

"The worst is behind us," Asst. Budget Bureau Director Maurice Mann said, although he cautioned "We may still get some bad numbers—we may still see some higher unemployment," he said.

NEWS IN BRIEF

TAKEO, Cambodia (AP) — Cambodian soldiers fired repeatedly into huddled masses of Vietnamese concentration camp inmates and left more than 100 dead, survivors reported today.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — C. A. Higdon of Rocheport was shot in the head today after he refused to help three men pull their car from a ditch on Interstate 70 near his home.

KENNETT, Mo. (AP) — Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. laid off 400 production employees today and blamed the Teamsters Union strike.

Note Cambodian Border Buildup by Allies

ROUTE ONE BORDER CROSSING, Vietnam (AP) — A massive South Vietnamese and American military buildup is taking place along the Cambodian border north and south of this key crossing point.

There is no evidence of armed American forays across the frontier. But a battalion from the U.S. 25th Infantry Division has moved into the border region to relieve South Vietnamese troops now operating as far as 10 miles inside Cambodia.

The American infantrymen from the 25th Division have taken over a Vietnamese patrol base called Blue about 3 1/2 miles northwest of the border crossing. There, the Americans are operating advanced radar to track North Vietnamese and Viet Cong rockets and mortars fired inside Cambodia. The radar operators say they relay their information back to the division's headquarters at Cu Chi.

A task force of more than 2,000 South Vietnamese troops plus hundreds of tanks and armored personnel carriers has been operating inside Cambodia in recent days. South Vietnamese jets and prop planes have been bombing North Vietnamese positions inside Cambodia in support of the task force.

Route One, the highway between Saigon and Phnom Penh, crosses the border 42 miles northwest of Saigon into an area of Cambodia called the Parrot's Beak on military maps. The military estimates more than 10,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops are in this region. Early this week they pushed to the outskirts of Svay Rieng, the Cambodian provincial capital about 30 miles west of Route One Crossing, but no attempt to take the town has been reported.

The situation is considered so politically explosive that American military police from the 25th Division have been stationed at the border to keep civilians and American military personnel from crossing into Cambodia.

The U. S. Command in Saigon has sent a message to all subordinate commands and province and district advisers ordering them to make no comments on the Cambodian situation.

The Cambodian leaders who deposed Prince Norodom Sihanouk last month officially asked the United States this week for arms. The State Department said Thursday the request is "being examined." Officials in Washington said no U.S. combat forces were asked for.

The Nixon administration was reported in a dilemma, caught between powerful congressional critics demanding that the U.S. withdraw from Southeast Asia continue and advisers contending that the Communists will take over Cambodia unless the new regime headed by Premier Lon Nol gets outside aid.

Meanwhile, the Cambodian government has launched a campaign against the 600,000 Vietnamese living in Cambodia, thousands have been rounded up for security checks, and hundreds have been reported slaughtered, either by troops and police or aroused Cambodian peasants.

The pastor of First Methodist Church, the Rev. Denis R. Craft, will be out of town Sunday and in his absence the Rev. John H. Thornberry, minister of visitation, will bring the message. The title of Mr. Thornberry's message is "What Can Religion Do For Us?"

Don Powell, chairman of political science at Central Missouri State College, will be the speaker for the study on China being held each Sunday evening this month. There are classes for youth and elementary children as well as a nursery attendant on duty.

Monday evening the Finance Committee will meet at 7:30 p.m. and the Administrative Board at 8:30 p.m. The Sedalia Council on Ministries will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Epworth Church and those delegates from First Church will attend this meeting.

"Redemption Through the Blood" is the Sunday morning message of Rev. Medford E. Speaker, pastor of the East Sedalia Baptist Church (Southern Baptist). Mr. Fred Yonce, Deacon of the Week, will read the Meditation in Scripture, 1 Peter 2:7-10. The Lesson in Scripture is taken from 1 Peter 1:13-19. "I Stand Amazed in the Presence" will be sung by the Men's Chorus during the morning worship hour.

Baptismal services will be held during the evening worship. The sermon will be entitled "Baptism—Its Meaning." The text will be selected passages of scripture. The Youth Choir, under the direction of Rev. Roy E. Dameron, will sing "I'm Not Afraid."

This Sunday at Christ Lutheran Pastor Ron Beckman will speak at both services on the theme "Choose Your God and Serve Him." The Adult Class that meets during the Education Hour will begin a series of study on the Mission Fields of the American Lutheran Church. There will be an all Lutheran roller skating party Sunday at the Roller Rink from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.

Men of the Church meet for Breakfast and Bible Study Monday at 6:30 a.m. at the Coffee Pot Cafe. Naomi Circle meets Wednesday at 1:15 p.m. The Esther Circle meets Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

"The Power of The Blood," is the title of the 10:45 morning message Pastor Jene Cook will preach at Faith Baptist Church, (Independent Fundamental) 2331 South Ingram. Mrs. Kenneth Keele will sing a solo entitled, "Amazed."

The 7 p.m. message is titled, "The Lord's Return." Special music will be a duet sung by Mrs. Fred Brummett and Mrs. Ben Rumsey, "My God and I."

Sunday school begins at 9:45 a.m. with a class for all ages.

Training Union begins at 6:15 p.m. A baby sitter is provided for all services.

Tuesday, April 21, 6:30 p.m., a Mother-Daughter banquet will be held in the church basement. The theme will be, "Showers of Blessings." The program will be a play written and directed by Mrs. Oliver Thomas, "It's Got To Be a Stage She's Going Through." Special music will be a duet sung by Mrs. Harold Ryan and Nancy and a devotional will be given by Mrs. Jene Cook.

The First Baptist Church (Southern Baptist) will hear the messages Sunday morning and evening preached by their pastor, Jess R. Wallace. Offertory music "He Lifted Me" will be sung by Clark Baker and Raymond G. Hall. Choral worship by the choir is entitled "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked."

During the evening worship approved candidates from the revival will be baptized. The choir will sing an arrangement of the hymn "Saved By His Power Divine."

Wednesday afternoon the children's choir will make preparation for the church festival music. This will be followed by a 5:30 church supper and visitation before the 7:30 prayer meeting time.

Christian Higher Education Day will be observed at First Christian Church Sunday. Literature from the five Christian Church sponsored Colleges in Missouri will be on display. Dr. Harry Purviance will bring the message at Morning Worship entitled "The Extravagance of Love." Chi Rho and C.Y.F. will meet Sunday at 5:30 p.m.

Evangelistic Visitation is scheduled for Tuesday at 7 p.m. and the Chancel Choir will practice Wednesday at 7:30 p.m.

"Building Faith and Curing Fear" is the sermon theme on which the Rev. Garner S. Odell will speak at Broadway Presbyterian Church this Sunday morning. The sermon is based on John 20:19-29.

Junior High Fellowship will have a party from 5 to 7 p.m. at the L.H. Tempel home, 2801 Southwest Blvd.

At 7:30 p.m. Thursday Alida Birkeland, AFS student from Norway, will speak to interested women of the church about her homeland. This meeting will be in the Westminster room.

The Community Church of Sedalia will hear Pastor Robert L. Kessler at the Worship Service beginning at 9:30 a.m. as he continues his series of messages on the abundant life with "The Problem of Bitterness" from II Kings 2:19-22. Special greeters will be Elizabeth and Ruth Lobaugh.

Choir practice is at 7 p.m. on Wednesday.

The "oneness" of mankind that insures peace may be found in man's "at-one-ment" with God. This spiritual relationship is explained in the Lesson-Sermon on "Doctrine of Atonement" to be read in all Christian Science churches on Sunday, April 19.

The Lesson-Sermon begins with a text from John: "God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved."

Services start at 11 a.m. at First Church of Christ Scientist, 120 East Sixth.

Youth Week at the Calvary Baptist Church will be April 19-26. The youth of the church will be teaching in the Sunday School and Training Union hour and will be in charge of the preaching services. The pastor, Charles Hendrickson, will bring a message in the morning hour on the Thiatira church at 10:45. In the evening hour at 7:30 the pastor will preach on "Advice and Direction to a Church." The message will be based on 1 Corinthians, Chapter 16.

Youth week will be closed out with a Youth Revival Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 24-26. A youth team from University of Missouri B.S.U. will be leading the revival.

Ross E. Haupt, pastor of Immanuel Lutheran Church, Sweet Springs, will hold two worship services this Sunday.

At 8 a.m. a St. Paul's College Sunday service will take place, with the Rev. Harold Belsheim of Concordia the guest speaker.

There is a 9:15 a.m. Sunday school for all ages, as well as junior and adult Bible classes.

Holy Communion will be celebrated at the 10:30 a.m. service. There will be a concert by the St. Paul's College Choir.

There will also be a 2 p.m. service at the Sweet Springs Nursing Home.

The Spring Rally of the Sedalia Zone Lutheran Women's Missionary League will be held Tuesday at the Holy Cross Lutheran Church, Cole Camp. Theme for the rally is, "The Zeal of the Spirit."

The 10 a.m. inspirational service will be conducted by the Rev. William Schultz, pastor of the Holy Cross Lutheran Church.

Mrs. E.J. Schmakenberg, zone chairman, will conduct the business meeting and Mrs. Lambert Mehl will address the group on, "Strengthening of the Home." Election of officers will be held during the business meeting.

People In The News

MOSCOW (AP) — Leonid I. Brezhnev, head of the Soviet Communist party, has planted a tree at a ceremony in Ulyanovsk touching off celebrations of the 100th anniversary of Lenin's birth.

Speaking to an assemblage of Soviet dignitaries Thursday, Brezhnev declared Leninism would lead "to the full abolition of exploitation and oppression, to the worldwide triumph of socialism."

"We know this will not be an easy task," he said. "Our enemies spare no effort or means to hold back revolutionary process. It will take no small effort to win a final victory. But we are confident this victory will come."

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The four-month marriage of singer Bobbie Gentry and millionaire gambler William Harrah has ended in the divorce courts.

A terse release Thursday from the office in Reno where Harrah runs the most profitable casino empire in Nevada said the parting was friendly, there was no property settlement and no alimony.

Harrah, 58, and Miss Gentry, 27, were wed in Reno last December after she appeared as a headliner in the showroom of his casino there.

ABERDEEN, S. Dakota (AP) — The Fischer quintuplets are now school kids.

In kindergarten at a rural school northwest of town are Mary Ann, Mary Margaret, Mary Magdalene, Mary Catharine and James Andrew. They reached their sixth birthday last September 14.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has filed an $11,425 lien on the estate of Dr. Samuel H. Shepard for unpaid 1968 income taxes.

Shepard's mother-in-law, Mrs. George Strickland, said Thursday the osteopath left no assets. "Let them come. There's nothing here," she declared.

Shepard, 47, spent 10 years in prison on a 1954 conviction of the murder of his first wife, then won a new trial and acquittal. He died in his home here April 6.

Real Estate Becoming A Popular Investment

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Sourced on a stock market that has been stalled for years, and convinced that inflation will pay a prolonged visit, individual investors, institutions and corporations are increasingly turning to real estate.

Real estate, it has been observed during the past four years of inflation, has been a true hedge against the declining value of the dollar. The stock market generally has failed to live up to its reputation as a hedge.

The Dow Jones Industrial Average, for example, stands far below its 1965 high. Urban land prices, however, have been rising at an average rate of six per cent a year, according to the Chase Manhattan Bank.

Many corporations have been aware of the profit possibilities for many years, among them, Alcoa, Westinghouse, Reynolds Metals, and several railroads which find their primary transportation duties far less rewarding.

Managers of private pension funds, beset by inflation and a poor stock market, have learned in recent years that real estate investments might offer them not only better returns but more stability as well.

The latest group to be attracted by real estate investment possibilities have been financial institutions such as life insurers and banks.

The Bank America Corporation is one of several mammoth banks to set up trusts for investing in buildings and other developments. Earlier this month Chase Manhattan Bank, First Pennsylvania Corp. and Wells Fargo & Co. developed similar trusts.

Life insurers, who once satisfied themselves by investing in real estate mortgages guaranteeing a fixed return, now are seeking direct equity investments. Several insurers have set up holding companies, with their insurance activities as subsidiaries, in order to free themselves from regulatory restrictions.

Factors other than inflation and a poor market also contribute to the strong interest in real estate. Among them:

"The case for land begins with the fact that the supply is virtually fixed while demand is constantly increasing," says Fortune Magazine.

"The expansion of business demands new space both downtown and in the suburbs. Real estate brokers claim a demand for office space exists in almost every major city, and that it will grow stronger in the 1970s."

"A tremendous housing shortage exists. If the nation is to achieve its goals of 26 million housing units by 1980, the lots on which these units are to be built will command premium prices."

About Town

ST. FRANCISVILLE, LA. — Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Rache and Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Edwards, Sedalia, were recent guests at Rosedown Plantation and Gardens here.

Rosedown is a restored plantation empire which reflects life on one of the great plantations of ante-bellum Louisiana. Their visit coincided with the peak bloom of century-old camellias and azaleas which have thrived at this country estate since the mid 1800s.

World Religions Express The Reverence for Life

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Earth Mother," the ancient mystery religions called it. St. Francis of Assisi expressed man's identity with nature in terms such as "Brother Ant" and "Sister Water." The late theologian-missionary Albert Schweitzer summed up the same attitude in the phrase, "reverence for life."

Such recurring intimations of the interrelationship of all creation, great and small, and humanity's stake in caring for it, is moving to the forefront of theology today in the awakened anxiety about environmental abuse.

"The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," said the Psalms, adding that so are the mountains, stars, seas, rivers and "every beast of the field, the cattle on a thousand hills, all the birds of the air, and all that moves in the field."

It is divine property that men occupy, not theirs, and not to be ravaged by their tenacity of it, religious scholars are emphasizing increasingly, bolstering the modern church accent on God's involvement in the material affairs of this world.

"Eco-theology," it has been called, a theology of ecology, of land, of conservation, of environment, of nature, an "ecological ethics." A headline in the Jesuit weekly, America, read: "Ecology the new religion?"

For "too long Christians have interpreted the Genesis command to exercise dominion over the earth as a mandate to conquer and exploit nature," says Dr. Richard A. Baer Jr., a New Testament scholar of Earlham College, Richmond, Ind., now serving on a new Environmental Stewardship Team of the National Council of Churches.

He adds that the utilitarian attitude, coupled with modern technological capabilities and America's constant urge to boost industrial production, threaten the survival of life on the planet.

"Failure to fulfill our obligations as faithful trustees of creation will inevitably bring God's judgment upon us," he says.

Churches across the country were urged by the National Council to observe a special "Environmental Sunday" this weekend in advance of the countrywide "Teach-in" planned for "Earth Day" next Wednesday.

"We need to appreciate more fully the religious and moral dimensions of the relation between nature and the human spirit," says Dr. Richard L. Means, a sociologist of Kalamazoo College in Michigan.

Some of the experts maintain that efforts to stop pollution and protect nature are only stop-gap holding actions, and that the only real solution lies in curbing the population explosion and decelerating Western emphasis on ever greater production and consumption.

More than 800 churchmen are expected to participate in a major interdenominational conference Oct. 15-18 in Washington on the topic, under the title, "Human Survival and Quality of Life."

St. Louis Building Slowdown

ST. LOUIS (AP) — About 60 per cent of the construction activity in the St. Louis area was expected to be halted today because of a Hoisting Engineers strike. President Alfred J. Fliescher of the Associated General Contractors said Thursday.

Fliescher said a survey indicated 40 per cent of the $500 million in construction projects shut down as of Thursday. The strike by Hoisting Engineers Local 513 and another by Teamsters Union Local 600 have made deep inroads into the St. Louis-area economy.

The Regional Industrial Development Corp. estimated the teamsters strike has caused the layoff of more than 35,000 workers and cost the economy more than $17 million in the period April 1-15.

The engineers struck the St. Louis Sand and Gravel Association April 1, sharply curtailing the supply of ready-mix concrete.

Representatives of the engineers and the sand and gravel firms met briefly Thursday.

Federal Mediator C. P. Hutchinson, who arranged the meeting, said the negotiators agreed to meet again either Monday or Tuesday.

The Teamsters situation was less clear. Local 600 President Donald Lane has denied that the 9,500 members of his unit are on strike. He said it is a case of no contract, no work.

Local 600 has remained off the job despite tentative agreement on a national contract providing a $1.10 hourly pay raise over three years.

The Teamsters International Union is in the process of setting up ratification meetings.

Republican Dinner Set For April 25

Victorious Republicans in the April 7 city election will be guests of honor at a recognition dinner April 25 in Heber Hunt cafeteria.

It was originally reported that the dinner would be held this Saturday.

Present will be Mayor Jerry Jones and Councilmen George Dugan, Jr., and James Gwinn. Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carhage, will be the guest speaker.

The dinner will begin at 6:15 p.m.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Administration has proposed barring the supersonic transport and any other civilian aircraft from producing sonic booms which would reach the ground.

Interested parties have until June 15 to comment on the proposed rule, which was published in the Federal Register Thursday. The regulation would not bar production of supersonic booms over water nor would it bar civilian aircraft from reaching supersonic speeds under certain conditions.

Nevertheless, Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., has introduced legislation banning supersonic flights over the United States. Reuss maintains such legislation is necessary because pressure to recover its $1.2 billion investment in the SST could lead the Nixon administration to lift any ban it imposes on the plane.

WASHINGTON (AP) — There will be no withdrawal of U.S. troops from Europe before mid-1971 and any reduction in forces after that will be relatively small, according to Secretary of State William P. Rogers.

The United States "has no intention of making any change that will in any way cause political or psychological repercussions that would weaken NATO... we consider NATO the most important security alliance that we have and we think that our troops in Europe are important to give credibility to that alliance."

The Secretary's comments were made Thursday in a television interview with West German newsmen.

Rogers also said there is "always a danger" the Vietnam war will expand but it is up to North Vietnam whether it becomes a general Indochina conflict.

He also said there is a "strong likelihood" the Soviet Union wants continued and controlled tension in the Mideast rather than a permanent peace. He said the situation in the Middle East is deteriorating.

Regarding East-West relations, however, Rogers said the United States supports West Germany's recent efforts to improve its Eastern Policy.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has published a new leaflet.

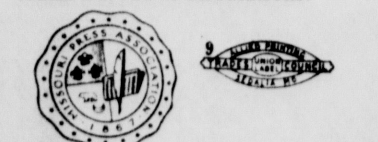

It warns people of the dangers of falling down.

Titled "Falls Hurt," the booklet says people's chances of falling are increased by illness, fatigue, emotional upset, alcohol and drugs.

Elections Shake Up Belfast

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The election of Northern Ireland's two leading Protestant militants to the provincial parliament rocked the moderate government of Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark today.

The victories Thursday of the Rev. Ian Paisley and his chief lieutenant, the Rev. William Beattie, are no challenge to the ruling Unionist party's two-to-one majority in the legislature.

But the switch of two rural districts to Paisley's Protestant Unionist party appeared to signal a grass roots rebellion against the government's concessions to the Roman Catholic minority.

Since last autumn's Catholic-Protestant street fighting, Chichester-Clark's government, under prodding from London, had made some progress toward satisfying Catholic complaints of discrimination in jobs, housing and voting.

Observers in London thought the militants' success might prompt waverers among the Unionist legislators to swing to the right. British Liberal party leader Jeremy Thorpe said there was a danger of fascism developing in Ulster.

MOSCOW (AP) — Vittorio Codovilla, a leading Latin-American Communist and general secretary of the Argentine Communist party, died of heart failure in Moscow Wednesday at the age of 76. Pravda reported today.

Welfare Package Victory

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has handed President Nixon a major victory by passing his far-reaching welfare reform package, but the administration faces a strong effort in the Senate to raise the assured family income over $1,600.

Several senators already have voiced their opposition to the package, but the administration faces a strong effort in the Senate to raise the assured family income over $1,600.

By a 243-155 vote that crisscrossed party lines, the House Thursday sent the measure to the Senate. Both Republican and Democratic leaders supported it, but conservatives in both parties—and a few liberals who wanted more generous provisions—were lined up in opposition.

The measure provides a $1,600 federally assured income for a family of four and increases the roll of eligible persons by an estimated 13 million, mostly the working poor and their families. It requires adult beneficiaries to register for job training and assignment. The federal government would assume a greater share of the cost and administration.

The aged, blind and disabled would be assured $110 a month. By official estimates, the bill would cost $4.4 billion—but opponents said the cost will turn out as much as three times that figure.

In the Senate, several members have tipped their hand on proposed amendments changing the benefits. Sen. Fred R. Harris, D-Okla., has proposed an initial family floor of $2,520, rising by stages to $3,600.

Sen. Charles L. Goodell, R-N.Y., advocates a $3,800 floor. Others, however, may attempt to trim the bill. Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., has termed the cost estimate hopelessly inadequate and said the work incentive provisions are no improvement over present law.

The Senate Finance Committee plans a preliminary briefing on the complicated measure next week, with hearings to follow, aimed at a Senate vote in June.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Highlights of the welfare reform bill: Provisions: A federally assured $1,600 income for a family of four. Expansion of welfare beneficiary rolls by 13 million, including the working poor. Requirements for beneficiaries to take job training and assignments, with financial inducements. Higher payments for blind, disabled and aged. Bigger federal role in financing and administration of welfare generally.

Support: President Nixon and leaders of both parties in the House; opposition also crosses party lines. Cost: $4.4 billion yearly by official estimate; opponents say three times that. Background: Almost universal dissatisfaction with present system of aid to families with dependent children. Costs have been soaring.

Prospects: Passed House Thursday, 243 to 155. Faces attempts in Senate for extensive amendments, by both conservatives and liberals.

S-C Staging Of 'Camelot' Is Well Done
By DOUG KNEIBERT
Managing Editor

The Smith-Cotton production of "Camelot" opened Thursday night in the school auditorium, and was well-received by the audience.

Stars of the musical tale of King Arthur's court were Steve Gray as King Arthur, Kathy Hinken as Guenevere and Joe Eschbacher as Lancelot. Mike Fiene was a standout in the role of King Pellinore, and Bill Findland was an effectively sinister Mordred.

Colorful costumes and sets added to the illusion of King Arthur's court, and the supporting chorus and dancers made for an effective production.

"Camelot" is sponsored by the Smith-Cotton P.T.A., and will continue Friday and Saturday nights at 8 p.m.

DAILY RECORD

Apollo

the original 101,000-pound Apollo 13 ship to return to earth.

Earlier today the astronauts discarded the lunar module that had kept them alive and the service module where the oxygen explosion occurred.

When they backed away from the service module, they discovered it was severely damaged, with one whole side ripped away.

The view was frightening. The damage was severe.

"There's one whole side of that spacecraft missing... It's really a mess," Lovell exclaimed.

An hour before Odysseus hit the atmosphere, the astronauts jettisoned their faithful lunar module.

"Farewell, Aquarius, and we thank you," Mission Control paid tribute to the sturdy lunar vehicle.

"She was a good ship," said Lovell.

The successful landing climaxed a flurry of activity in the final hours of the abortive mission.

In a one-hour period, starting about six hours before touchdown, the astronauts activated electrical power on the command ship, fired control jets on the lunar module to take aim at the Pacific and separated their service module.

The condition of the service module, where the Monday rupture occurred, provided a big surprise.

"There is one whole side of that spacecraft missing... almost from the base to the engine," Lovell reported excitedly.

"There's a dark brown streak down the side. It's really a mess."

He said one whole panel, 22 feet long, and part of the engine bell were missing.

"Looks like a lot of debris is just hanging off the side," Lovell said. "It's near the S-Band antenna."

The service module contained most of the long-life oxygen and electrical power for the Apollo 13 command ship.

The explosion Monday night rendered the command vehicle useless until today when power was restored with batteries.

The astronauts discarded the battered service module to expose the command ship during the blistering re-entry through the atmosphere.

Earlier, Swigert slipped into the command ship cabin to start the batteries and oxygen system. These operate from a separate system from the service module and are designed for use during re-entry.

Lovell and Haise fired the lunar craft's small jets for 23 seconds to zero in on the intended landing site 610 miles southeast of American Samoa.

Wednesday evening and Thursday morning someone had damaged an antenna on his automobile while it was parked at the above address.

Disturbances Strike At Regional Schools

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A fire, bomb scares, disturbances and fights with police broke out Thursday in high schools at Wichita, Topeka and Lawrence in Kansas and at Kansas City and Sedalia in Missouri.

Nine youths, none of them students at the school, were arrested at Westport High School in Kansas City where police used tear gas and clubs to disperse a group of students who refused to go to class.

At Wichita's South High School a white boy and a black boy began fighting over a girl, police said, and the fight quickly spread to others of both races.

When a large force of police arrived at the school, it became a battle between five Negro students and policemen in the cafeteria. It took an hour to quiet the students so classes could be resumed.

Four black juveniles were arrested, then released to their parents.

Police Lt. Col. Jack Bruce said Wichita schools would be watched closely today.

In Topeka, a fire in the stage curtains of the auditorium at Highland Park High School caused the school to be closed until Monday. Fire Chief Floyd Dibern, who estimated the loss at $12,500, said it was an obvious case of arson. Some windows were smashed in the building.

Robert Jennings, Highland Park principal, said about 20 black students came to his office and demanded a more extensive program for Black Awareness Week, but he couldn't satisfy them.

"About that time the glass breaking started," Jennings said. "I don't know if the fire had started at that time." He said he thought only 10 to 15 students were involved in destructive acts.

At Lawrence, all public schools were closed today in the wake of a confrontation Thursday between police and about 100 Negro students at the senior high school.

and dispersed when threatened with tear gas.

A bomb hoax caused evacuation of Lawrence's Central Junior High. No bomb was found and classes were resumed.

Two telephoned bomb threats interrupted studies at Sedalia's Smith-Cotton High School for a while.

In Topeka about 75 Mexican-American students marched to the city hall and complained to Mayor Gene Martin that they were discriminated against and denied the right of assembly.

They also objected to the use of lima beans instead of pinto beans in the high school's cafeteria chili.

Students in Kansas City's Central High School were sent out of the building three times because of telephoned bomb threats.

A group of students, mostly Negroes, from the troubled East High marched to the school board's downtown offices but were denied admittance.

The school board president, The Rev. Charles J. Briscoe, talked with the group outside the building for nearly 30 minutes.

Litter is Nation's Biggest Springtime Harvest

WASHINGTON (AP) — Springtime '70. As snowbanks recede workers fan out to reap a bumper crop of the nation's ugliest harvest: Litter.

Government officials, meanwhile, are proposing new taxes, regulations or research on the NRs—nonreturnable bottles and cans—to cut down the potential source of trash.

Clean-up volunteers, stirred in part by popularization of the environment as a social and political issue, are supplementing highway and park crews which have been gathering the trash for years.

Stone County, Ark., freed children from school to pick up litter. Officials expect 70,000 or more persons to turn out for "Green Up Day" in Vermont Saturday. Huntington, W. Va., residents will be scouring the town for bottles the same day to earn a $20 a ton bounty from Owens-Illinois glass company.

And in Portland, Ore., John Piacentini shows off a pile of cans and bottles outside the warehouse for the 60 Plaid Pantry supermarkets he owns.

The pile represents only a few of the 3 million or so cans and bottles turned in to his stores after he offered a half a cent apiece. The project, which lasted 18 days, cost him $15,000.

Sen. Gaylord Nelson, D-Wis., estimates that unless the gradual demise of the deposit bottle is reversed, the 25 billion one-way cans and bottles produced in 1958 will swell to 58 billion six years from now.

Nelson's proposed Packaging Pollution Control Act would empower the government to levy "packaging charges" on containers "scaled to reflect the level of adverse environment effects."

Oregon and Indiana are considering similar measures.

More immediately, Nelson and other officials like presidential consumer assistant Virginia Knauer have turned their heaviest fire on the can and bottle industry in an attempt to roll back the snowballing trend toward NRs.

The expense of the NRs is plain. The wholesale price lists for Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola in Washington show a case of 24 12-ounce deposit bottles is $2.10 plus 48 cents deposit. A case of 10-ounce throw-away bottles costs $2.55. A case of 12-ounce cans costs $2.85.

Beer bottles used to be good for 38 trips from brewery to consumer and back again. Now deposit beer bottles make 19 trips. Returnable soft drink bottles make half that many.

Industry spokesmen cite the same figures as a sign that increasingly affluent consumers want the convenience of throw-aways despite the cost. Richard L. Cheney, executive director of the Glass Manufacturers Institute, notes Pepsi-Cola raised deposits to five cents in New York recently on a new batch of 600,000 16-ounce bottles. The bottles disappeared in six months.

But some dispute the contention that consumers want the NRs.

Dave Levinger, president of the New York local of the Soft Drink Workers Union, says the rise of larger bottling plants covering a wide area leads bottlers to encourage NRs and save the cost of transporting empty bottles.

The can and bottle industry supports public service cleanup campaigns and works with the government on research on disposal.

Aluminum firms pay a half a cent apiece for cans and melt them down for more cans. David P. Reynolds of Reynolds Aluminum reports 217,000 cans were turned in in one week in Los Angeles after offering the reward.

The Glass Container Manufacturers Institute had planned a $7.5 million campaign to promote throw-away bottles until Mrs. Knauer criticized the campaign in a speech. Now the campaign will include antilitter messages.

Pepsi-Cola is test marketing a burnable bottle. Federally funded scientists at Clemson University are experimenting with one which dissolves in water after being broken. The U.S. Bureau of Mines has developed a way to separate metal and glass from trash and make the substances reusable.

Salvation Army Board Installs

The annual Salvation Army Advisory Board and Tree of Lights Victory Dinner was held Thursday evening at the First Methodist Church, at which time new officers for 1970 were installed by Brigadier John W. Paton, divisional commander, midland division, St. Louis.

Lacy P. Belt was installed as chairman, succeeding Jess Brown who has held that office for the past three years. Other officers installed were: Clinton Black, vice-chairman; Mrs. Emory Bowman, secretary; and Henry C. Salveter, treasurer.

The speaker of the evening was Paton, who told how William Booth felt the call to help the poor and left the Methodist Church in England to become involved in problems of the poor, more than a century ago.

The poor and unclean people came, only to be told by the church ushers to go around to a rear door and were allowed only to stand behind the organ, Paton said. Booth did not like this, so he went on a street corner to preach and to help the poor, and this was how the Salvation Army was started, Paton said.

At that time there were no child labor laws, but there were sweat shops. About the same time, 1865, people became interested in helping others, and along with the Salvation Army, the Red Cross and the Y.M.C.A. were born. The spirit moved in the hearts of people, Brigadier Paton stated, and young men and women went into the Salvation Army work.

Paton went on to explain the workings of various Salvation Army departments, such as the Men's Social Service group in St. Louis, emergency canteen services, and the workings of the Salvation Army on the corps level, which exists in Sedalia.

Maj. Marjorie Weber, who has been posted to Sedalia four times now, is in charge of the Sedalia corps.

Jess Brown presided at the meeting and introduced the speaker.

Since Major Weber was unable to find the complete record of the Tree of Lights because she was not here at Christmas, she gave out certificates to the following organizations that participated: Altrusa, American Legion Auxiliary, American War Mothers, Business and Professional Women's Club, Job's Daughters, Junior Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis, Missouri Pacific Women's Club, Rotary and Veterans of World War I. These were all she found that had been bell ringers for the Tree of Lights at Christmas. There was also a DeMolay recognized.

Major Weber presented to Jess Brown a framed certificate of appreciation signed by officers of the midland division and members of the board for his work during the past three years for the Salvation Army.

She spoke of the fine service given the past year and pledged even greater service in the coming year to the community by the Salvation Army. The meeting ended with Major Weber giving the benediction.

Most of the board members were present, introduced themselves, their husbands or wives and their guests.

Farm Roundup

Hired Hand Continuing To Dwindle from Scene

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hired man continued to disappear from American farms last year as a result of what the Agriculture Department calls "further utilization of farm labor-saving technology."

The 1969 farm labor force totaled about 2.6 million persons of age 14 or older who did some farm work for wages during the year, according to an Economic Research Service analysis issued this week.

These hired workers represented a 12 per cent cutback from 1968 and reflected a downward trend which began nearly 20 years ago.

In 1950 there were more than 4.3 million hired workers on farms. Except for a few yearly fluctuations their decline has been consistent ever since, records show.

The report came as a Senate labor subcommittee heard testimony on the reduction of migratory farm laborers from 400,000 a decade ago to about 250,000 last year.

Arnold R. Weber, assistant secretary of labor for manpower, told the subcommittee on Tuesday that the system of migratory labor—workers who follow harvests from area to area—is gradually losing steam as a major labor market activity.

But the Labor Department official said, migrant workers will continue to be a significant part of the farm labor force for some time to come.

The new Agriculture Department report, however, shows that the cutback in migrant labor most recently has been in line with the over-all reduction in the total farm worker force. Migrant workers in 1969, for example, comprised about 10 per cent of the total or the same proportion as a year earlier.

But over the past decade, according to ERS statistics, migrant workers have been reduced a bit more rapidly than the entire work force, shrinking about 37 per cent during the 10 years, compared with around 28 per cent for all workers.

Last year's total farm labor drop of nearly 350,000 workers was the sharpest since a decline of 365,000 in 1966 and a 635,000 reduction in 1959, records indicated.

A profile of the 1969 farm laborer showed he was mostly young—a median age of 23—male, white, earned an average of $837 in cash wages or $10.75 a day for an average of 78 days of farm work.

Only 301,000 were full-time farm employees, averaging 319 days of work last year for a total average income of $3,485. About 60 per cent of the total labor force, mostly housewives and students, worked only part of the year.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department has officially published meat import figures for February showing the two-month total this year up 143.9 per cent from the same period in 1969.

A total of 100.7 million pounds of quota-type meat, mostly beef from Australia, New Zealand and Latin America, was imported during February, or nearly double the amount of a year earlier.

In all, nearly 225.2 million pounds were imported during January-February, compared with 92.3 million a year earlier when the nation's dock strike was on.

Agreements with the supplying nations this year under the quota-law system call for a total of 1.062 billion pounds.

CANNES, France (AP) — Pablo Picasso, 88, has made a rare and unannounced public appearance to watch a film about himself.

He and his wife, Jacqueline, saw "Portrait of Picasso," filmed by Edward Quinn, an Irishman living on the Riviera.

Police Foil Bomb Attempt

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A bomb made of four sticks of dynamite and a timing device was disarmed by police early today after it was found on the rear steps of a church at the Country Club Plaza.

It was the 10th bomb incident in the Kansas City area in eight days, besides two at nearby Lawrence, Kan.

Joseph "Mike" Donahue, private detective hired Thursday by the Plaza Association, said he found the bomb at the Seventh Church of Christ Scientist at 11:30 p. m. while checking parking lots.

At 11:50 police discovered the bomb was set to explode at midnight. Residents were cleared from two apartment buildings near the church.

When the bomb failed to explode, Frank Lee, an agent for the Alcohol, Tax and Firearms division of Internal Revenue Service, volunteered to disarm it. Lee carried the device into the street and snipped the wires at 12:20 a. m.

The bomb was taken to a police laboratory for study.

Two FBI technicians from Washington joined the Kansas City Metro squad in probing the rash of bombings.

Metro agents went to Lawrence Thursday to see if there was any apparent connections between the incidents. A bomb started a fire that destroyed a Lawrence furniture store Wednesday night. On April 9 a pipe bomb was thrown through a window of a savings association office in Lawrence, but it didn't explode.

Killed Near Columbia

ASHLAND, Mo. (AP) — John M. Sullivan, 23, of Jefferson City was killed early today in a car-truck collision on U.S. highway 63 in Boone County.

The highway patrol said Sullivan's car veered across the center line, sideswiped a tractor-trailer truck and plunged off the road.

Seeks Re-election

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — Republican Lawrence K. Roos announced Wednesday he will seek re-election to a third term as supervisor of St. Louis County.

The 'Silent Sermons'

Taking up the cause long championed by the late Sen. Everett Dirksen of Illinois, Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania has proposed a constitutional amendment which would permit voluntary, nondenominational prayers in schools and other public buildings.

Scott will undoubtedly discover, as did Dirksen, a solid core of support among many Americans who believe that a large part of what's wrong with youth and present-day American society is due to the absence of prayers and Bible reading in the schools.

In this respect, two surveys reported in the current "Psychology Today" magazine seem particularly pertinent.

In one, the largest survey ever undertaken to examine the political beliefs of any body of clergymen, 1,580 California ministers from nine Protestant denominations were queried by three University of California sociologists.

"When we analyzed the results," write the researchers, "We began to see why Christian congregations have been so unshaken by years of sermonizing. It turns out that whether or not people listen, there is not much to hear. Most sermons rarely touch on controversial moral and ethical issues. More than a third of the clergy said that never in their entire ministries had they taken a pulpit stand on a political issue."

They found that the more "traditionalist" a minister was — that is, the more he believed in certain basic doctrines such as the divinity of Jesus, life beyond death and the literal existence of the devil — the less interested he was in worldly problems and the more he emphasized the negative "thou shalt nots" of Christianity and ignored the positive "thou shalt."

Compared to the joys of the world to come, for the "traditionalist" the problems of war, race and poverty were not worth talking about.

"These findings appear dismal," conclude the authors, "for those who hope to awaken the churches to the urgent problems of modern society. So far as we can tell, Sunday mornings will remain the same, with America's silent majority sitting in the churches listening to silent sermons."

A second survey, of members of a Protestant church in a southern city, found two types of churchgoers: A tiny minority of "devotionalists," for whom religion was a central fact in their daily lives and an end in itself; and a large majority of "instrumentalists," for whom religion was a means to an end — important for its social benefits, as an occasional solace and as an ultimate ticket to heaven — and for whom the form of religion took precedence over substance.

Significantly, the more "instrumentalist" a person was rated, the less compassionate and tolerant he was found to be toward his fellowmen.

It would be interesting to see the results of a nationwide "in-depth" survey on the question of prayer and Bible reading in the schools.

Would it find that those Americans falling in the "traditionalist" or "instrumentalist" categories are the ones who are most in favor of overriding the Supreme Court's ruling on the issue?

Could it be that what is really needed in America is not prayer in the schools but more sincere prayer in the churches?

Washington Merry-Go-Round

'Hickel Fever' in Washington

WASHINGTON — The last hasn't been heard of Interior Secretary Walter Hickel's $28,500 office remodeling job, which column charged had violated the law.

Not only are government auditors and congressional sleuths investigating the charge, but some of Hickel's aides apparently have been caught in similar violations. Both the General Accounting Office and a House Appropriations sub-committee are digging into our report that Hickel, in violation of law, called in a decorator pal from Seattle to do the $28,500 refurbishing job instead of negotiating a contract, putting the job up for bids, or letting government designers do the decorating.

Now, unhappily for the taxpayers, Hickel Fever has spread through his department. Assistant Secretary James Smith soaked the taxpayers $13,000 — $9,500 of it illegally — to do over his suite. Smith's $606 desk, for instance, was bought without a waiver from the General Services Administration, which should have certified that a suitable desk wasn't already available in government stock.

Many other luxurious items in his wall-to-wall, russet-carpeted executive suite also were purchased without waivers. Yet these are clearly required by federal procurement law.

— Candy-Stripe Curtains — Hollis Dole, another Assistant Secretary, laid out $1,000 of the taxpayers' money for a new desk, which was also purchased with total disregard for GSA regulations. And the candy-stripe curtains in his plush, newly decorated government office are enough to catch a taxpayer's breath.

But the most sumptuous suite of all has been decorated to the expensive tastes of Assistant Secretary Lawrence Dunn, who spent $10,000 on rich, thick, green draperies and Early American furniture. He, too, didn't bother to obtain the necessary GSA waivers for $7,500 worth of the fancy purchases.

The centerpiece in his rich new layout, by the way, is a slick wall map of Richard Nixon's 1968 presidential campaign route — as evidence, presumably, of his GOP fealty. Even Solicitor Mitchell Melich, the Interior Department's legal watchdog, spent $7,400 of his $13,500 office remodeling job on the open market outside GSA rules.

The Interior officials have been called on the congressional carpet by Congresswoman Julia Hansen, D-Wash., chairman of the House Interior Appropriations Subcommittee, to explain why fine $500 GSA desks of walnut weren't good enough for them.

They have hedged and haggled in a desperate attempt to make their law violations somehow sound legal. Under the law, they claim, emergency purchases can be made without GSA waivers. They don't sound too convincing, however, when they try to explain what a great emergency it was to redo their offices. Indeed, these executives suites seemed sufficiently resplendent without any remodeling at all.

Meanwhile, management operations director George Gauzza, who supervised the redecoration, has won an award for his work in handling the "transition" between the Democrats and Republicans. Note: President Nixon would like all federal employees to help him win the Battle of the Budget by conserving every paper clip. Yet his top aides have been splurging on $1,100 desks and tables, thick russet rugs, candy-stripe decorator drapes and $1,500 aluminum doors. Attorney General John Mitchell, for one, has just lavished $30,000 on remodeling his official dining room and kitchen all the way down to the food warmers. But at least old Law and Order broke no laws in buying his table, chairs, rug and dishwasher.

— How Big is U.S.? — The Nixon administration, flustered over an internal feud over how big America is, recently forced a list-minute cancellation of Senate hearings on the outer continental shelf.

The Interior Department wants the U.S. to claim a wide shelf, but the Defense Department wants only a narrow shelf. The Commerce Department has given indecisive backing to Interior. And the State Department, as usual, is wavering between the two views.

Senator Lee Metcalf, D-Mont., had invited Interior and Defense experts to testify on how far from shore America's rights should extend.

The question is vital. New technology is on the brink of making mining, drilling and even "sea farming" possible well out on the shelves that taper off from our shores. For example, if rich mineral deposits are discovered 50 miles from shore, would it be legal for the Russians to move in a mining rig?

The day before the hearings on April 8, Metcalf received a worried call from the White House asking for a postponement. The senator obliged, setting a new date for April 22.

White House aides, meanwhile, are busy holding meetings and telephoning the antagonists to straighten out the internal feud and establish a united administration position on the multi-trillion-dollar sub-sea empire.

— Duplicate Mailings — The White House, which is financed by the taxpayers, is supposed to keep its operations separate from the Republican National Committee. Observers were surprised, therefore, to find the same telltale mistake showing up on letters from the White House and from the GOP committee.

Information Czar Herb Klein's office explained to this column that the White House lacked its own plates and was using the GOP address lists for some mailings.

Feminine Talk Difficult To Understand for Men

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — One of the ordeals of being a man in a woman's world is trying to understand feminine talk.

"You never talk to me anymore," a wife often complains to her husband, after they have been married a few years.

The reason is quite simple.

They speak two different languages. He speaks American English. She speaks a kind of personalized jabberwocky, for every woman makes up a language of her own as she rattles on.

The only time in marital life a husband and wife really understand what the other is saying is when they are newlyweds. This is when they speak what is known as "honeymoon prattle," and is hardly complimentary to either of them as it consists largely of simulated baby talk. Such as:

"Does Daddykins love his babykins?"

"Oo knows Daddykins loves his babykins."

Familiar Face On TV Show

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If the singer on the Merv Griffin Show Thursday night looked familiar, it's not surprising. He's David Canary of "Bonanza."

Canary plays Candy, the somewhat mysterious, somewhat satanic ranchhand to the Cartwrights.

"I want to expand the 'Bonanza' image," he said. "I'm not a Western man. I don't consider myself an action man. Let's face it, I'm really Gene Kelly inside Jack Palance's body."

He stirred his coffee and said, "I started out as a singer. That's the best kept secret in Hollywood. Every show I went on as a singer was canceled. Now I've got a break and I'm on the Merv Griffin Show."

What about NBC's own "Tonight Show?" He shrugged. "Johnny Carson's people turned me down five times. NBC couldn't get me on the sub-way."

Canary was silent for a moment, then added, "But I understand the psychology. They don't know I can sing. And fourth lead in 'Bonanza.' In the city who needs 'Bonanza?'"

Everything physical about Canary belies the fact that he is a singer. The looks, the big rawboned body. He made the Pop Warner All-America football team in 1960 and later was drafted by the Denver Broncos after graduation from the University of Cincinnati.

Instead, he tried his hand at off-Broadway musical comedy. He landed a part in "Hi, Paisano" and met Julie Anderson, a petite brunette, who was in "Little Mary Sunshine." Canary's play lasted two glorious days, but they courted during a succession of other plays and were married on the West Coast.

Two years in the Army came next, after which he joined a road company of "The Fantasticks" in San Francisco. That led to a part in ABC's "Peyton Place," which in turn led to a featured role in the movie "Hombre." Executive producer David Dortort saw the film and signed him for NBC's "Bonanza" three years ago.

The concept of the role has changed, primarily due to the antievolution thing," he said. "Candy originally was a violent character. I've gained something because they've given me roles that require more acting, that have more range to them."

"But I miss the old incisiveness. I liked the contrast to the Cartwrights. Now I'm Candy Cartwright."

Candy said he wanted to return to the stage and also to make some films, but in the meantime "my desire is to stay with 'Bonanza' as long as possible, then split."

Innkeeper is Killed

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A tavern owner was shot and killed and three customers wounded Wednesday night by a masked man.

Witnesses told officers the tavern owner, Vincent Tenor, was shot as he grabbed a weapon from under the bar and started after the assailant.

The witnesses said the assailant stepped into the bar shortly before midnight wearing a handkerchief over his face and carrying a weapon. They told officers he fired several shots that struck three customers.

The wounded customers were Mrs. Dorothy Laughney, 48, struck in the ankle and lower back; her husband, Donald Laughney, 51, who suffered a flesh wound of the head; and Roland White, 50, who was hit in the abdomen.

A.A.U.W. Hears Program On Lyceum Theatre

Mrs. Paige Williams, a member of the faculty of Missouri Valley College and a member of the cast of the Arrow Rock Lyceum productions, explained some of the details of play production to the Sedalia Branch of American Association of University Women at a recent meeting at the Holiday Inn.

Mrs. Williams explained in detail the various stages through which a play progresses and illustrated her remarks with slides of the various productions of the Lyceum Theatre.

Following a question and answer period, Mrs. Ned Postels, president, conducted the business meeting. She thanked Mrs. Russell Rhoads for her work as program chairman and Mrs. Jack Cunningham, Mrs. Van Jones, Mrs. Delta Greenawalt, Mrs. Charles Wendt, Mrs. John Snodgrass and Miss Roma Walker for serving as hostesses.

Mrs. Rhoads reported that the local libraries had been cooperating in presenting displays of art and drama during the month of April and that trips to the Arrow Rock Lyceum and Nelson Art Gallery were being planned.

Plans were also discussed for the coming Sidewalk Bazaar.

Royals Try On Slugging Shoes

MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Kansas City Royals were happy just to be able to play a game again. Winning was the icing on the cake.

"We were kind of ragged and rusty today," Royals Manager Charlie Metro said after his team stopped the Milwaukee Brewers, 8-6, Tuesday afternoon. "I'm just glad we won."

The Royals had been out of action since Sunday. A snow storm wiped out games Monday and Tuesday at Minnesota and Wednesday was a scheduled day off for Kansas City.

"At least we were hitting the ball," Metro said, explaining that the long lay-off hurt his pitching staff.

"You can do one of two things about your pitchers," Metro said. "You can either skip over those who were supposed to pitch or you can continue with the same rotation, just moving everyone back a few games. We decided to go with our regular rotation."

One Kansas City hurler who apparently wasn't affected was veteran reliever Moe Drabowsky. The righthander came on in the bottom of the seventh inning and halted a Milwaukee rally. Then he finished up the game without allowing a hit and striking out four batters in a row, including all three in the eighth.

"I was throwing mostly fast balls and some curves," Drabowsky said, "keeping the ball low."

A former Chicago Cub bonus player, Drabowsky hurled in the National League for the first seven years of his career, including stops with the Milwaukee Braves and the Cincinnati Reds. In 1962, he was traded to the Kansas City Athletics and later pitched with Baltimore before returning to Kansas City, this time with the Royals.

"I've been lucky," Drabowsky said of his career. "When I was a short relief man with the A's

Blues Take Playoff Bid Over Stars

ST. PAUL-MINNEAPOLIS — Red Berenson and Ab McDonald triggered the power play 47 seconds apart, and the St. Louis Blues got the last quack.

The powerful St. Louis forwards punched in two second period goals in that span Thursday night as the Blues took a 4-2 victory over the Minnesota North Stars and won their quarter-final playoff in the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs.

On each goal, Minnesota had two players in the penalty box. And after the Blues ran their playoff-leading power plays to 10 goals, St. Louis had a 3-1 lead.

Ray Cullen scored for the North Stars to cut the lead to 3-2, and someone in the crowd of 14,908 threw a live duck on the ice. The Minnesota fans had been asked to show restraint in their enthusiasm after weekend incidents in which beer, eggs and programs were thrown at the Blues.

The Blues, left little doubt in the third period, however, when Berenson set up Larry Keenan on a 2-on-1 rush for the insurance goal.

"The two power play goals in the second period made the difference," said Berenson. "How many power play goals did we have in this series? Ten? That shows how important penalties are. You don't take penalties when you're one man short."

The North Stars got in their predicament when Billy Collins was tripping. Then, playing Coach Charlie Burns was called for delaying the game by touching the puck in front of the Minnesota net with his hands.

McDonald scored his second goal, bringing Collins out of the penalty box. But he was called for slashing Berenson almost immediately and the St. Louis "Red Baron" quickly made it 3-1.

"In the last game in St. Louis I could see them weakening," McDonald said about the North Stars. "I think we may have had too much manpower for them. They made a good game out of it and didn't quit until the end but they didn't seem to have the zip."

The North Stars, losing out in the sixth game of the playoffs, had squandered the series at two games each last weekend after a frantic month of getting into the playoffs. St. Louis took a 3-2 edge in the series Tuesday with a 6-3 victory in St. Louis.

The Blues now play Pittsburgh starting Sunday night in St. Louis in the next step of the Stanley Cup.

Blues' Goal Didn't Count

Jim Roberts (center) appears to have scored for the St. Louis Blues as he is sandwiched between North Stars' goalie Cesare Manigo (30) and defenseman Tom Reid during the first period of action in the Minnesota-St. Louis Stanley Cup playoff game, Thursday night in and Baltimore, I was fortunate to be with other good relievers. That way, no one burned out his arm."

Bill Butler got credit for the victory, his second of the season against no defeats, despite giving up home runs to rookie Danny Walton, the AL's home run and runs batted in leader, and Greg Goossen.

Happy Bruins' Heroes

Bruins Squelch NY's Stanley Playoff Bid

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The waiting is over for Pittsburgh and Chicago.

The Penguins and Black Hawks, standing by since sweeping their respective first round Stanley Cup series, swing back into action Sunday now that St. Louis and Boston have finished off their opponents.

The Blues, winners of the National Hockey League's West Division title, eliminated Minnesota 4-2 Wednesday night, ending their series in six games. The Bruins finished off New York 4-1, ending their series in six as well.

The divisional finals begin Sunday with Pittsburgh at St. Louis and Boston at Chicago.

Boston went into its game against the Rangers with a set plan and made it work, getting two goals from their super defenseman, Bobby Orr.

"We wanted to check them close in the early part of the game," said Coach Harry Sinden. "We figured if the game was tied or they were down a goal and facing elimination, they'd open it up and give us more chances."

That's just the way it worked with the Bruins turning Ranger mistakes into second period goals by Orr and Wayne Cashman to take the lead and then clinching it in the third on Orr's second goal and another by Derek Sanderson when the Rangers opened up play.

With Orr on the ice, the Bruins hardly need a strategy. The super defenseman who made NHL history by winning the scoring title with 120 points in the regular season, was slightly sensational. He scored his sixth and seventh goals of the series, one on a power play deflection up close, the other on a 50-foot slap shot.

When he wasn't scoring, Orr dazzled the Rangers with his stickhandling and rink-length rushes. Asked if he thought his offensive output this season might influence youngsters playing defense, he grinned.

"They might get themselves in a lot of trouble by copying me," he said. "I get caught up in a lot."

Orr explained that his tactics on the ice are determined by what the other team does when he gets the puck. "If there's an opening, I'll take off," he said. "If not, I'll pass."

The Rangers gave him enough openings Wednesday, something Sinden thinks his club might not see against Chicago.

"They're a tough team," he said. "They don't leave themselves open for good scoring opportunities as much as the Rangers do."

St. Louis, trying to reach the Stanley Cup final round for the third straight year, zoomed into the West finals on the strength of a pair of goals by veteran Ab McDonald.

McDonald and Red Berenson, who also picked up a pair of assists, scored two goals 47 seconds apart early in the second period while two Minnesota players were in the penalty box.

Minnesota had taken the early lead on a goal by defenseman Barry Gibbs but McDonald's first goal of the night tied it for the Blues. Then, after the two quick power play goals, Ray Cullen hit for the North Stars but Larry Keenan's third period goal clinched it for St. Louis.

St. Louis goalie Glenn Hall, playing in a record 108th Stanley Cup game, kicked out 32 shots while Minnesota's Cesare Manigo blocked 23 shots.

6 Mile Record Falls at Relays

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Larbi Oukada can't beat his wife in footraces in parks, but he put on a 24th lap sprint seldom seen on any big time track Thursday to get the 45th Kansas Relays off to a record-breaking start.

The 23-year-old native of Morocco romped away from his challengers on the final lap of the open six-mile run. He was timed in 59.6 seconds on the last lap as he smashed the Kansas Relays record by nearly a minute the first time he ran the event.

After his performance, he confessed losing short wind sprints to his wife of two weeks in a park at Hays, Kan., where he is a sophomore majoring in languages at Fort Hays State.

"My wife can beat me at 50 yards when we run in the park," Oukada said.

"I'm not fast at the short distances."

His wife, the former Jeannie Carlson of Russell, Kan., teaches in an elementary school at Natoma, Kan. They met in a college club.

Oukada came to the United States upon advice of a friend he met when he was a student in France, Jerome McFarland of Iowa, who recommended Fort Hays State.

Oukada was a steeplechase runner on the 1968 Morocco Olympic team at Mexico City but didn't finish the race. He's now shooting for the 1972 Olympics.

He paced himself in the six-mile, staying close to former U.S. Olympic distance runner Oscar Moore, now a graduate student at Southern Illinois, and Iowa State junior Dennis McGuire.

"I could have run it faster," he said of his time, 28:45.4. "But I wanted to save some for the steeplechase and the distance medley relay."

Oukada beat Moore by about 40 yards. Craig Runyan of Colorado, who set the record here last year at 29:44.3, was third, and McGuire fourth.

Barbara Lawson of Colorado repeated as women's 880 champion, breaking her own record with a 2:12.1 clocking.

The negotiating committees of the two leagues last week agreed tentatively to merge with the ABA forced to pay an $11-million indemnity to the older NBA.

Family Victories In Tennis Games

CHARLOTTE, N. C. (AP) — Cliff Richter defeated Hungary's Peter Skoke and his sister Nancy beat West Germany's Ilse Buding Thursday in the Carolinas International Tournament.

Nancy downed Miss Buding 6-0, 6-0 in a scant 25 minutes. Cliff took a little longer before winning 6-3, 6-1.

Laura DuPont of Charlotte continued her role as tournament Cinderella by defeating Nell Truman of England 6-4, 7-5. The English lass was top seeded in foreign women's play for the tournament.

The top seeded foreign man, Manuel Santana of Spain, and Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia, both had to struggle to win.

Australia Wins

TOKYO (AP) — Australia won the two opening singles tennis matches from Japan today and took a 2-0 lead in the Davis Cup Asian Zone Section A finals.

SHAVING STROKES

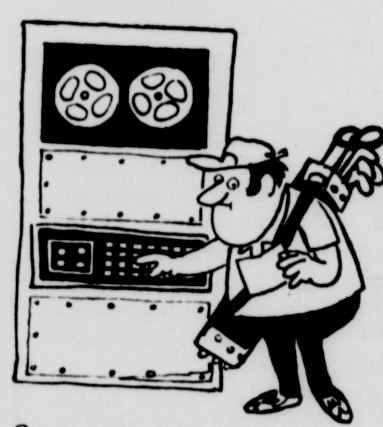

by Frank Beard

2-Keep a Record

Ever since I began taking golf fairly seriously I have kept brief records on all the rounds I have played. I recommend the practice to you as a means to orderly improvement.

Once you are convinced that the only way you can lower your handicap is by practicing, you will want to practice on those areas of your game that consistently are letting you down. Don't practice what you're doing well. I'm always afraid that if I do that I'll work myself right out of a good groove.

It's hard to know what you need to work on without keeping at least a cursory chart on your play. I suggest that you enter in a little black book after each round the number of fairways you hit off the tee, the number of greens you hit in regulation figures (par minus two putts), the number of times you chipped to within six feet of the hole or one-putt distance, the number of times you hit green-side bunker shots to within one-putt distance, and the number of times you got down in two putts from farther than 15 feet away.

If, for example, your long putts are failing you, spend more practice time on long putts. Concentrate on them during your next round.

I believe you will find that keeping this kind of a record leads to more consistent play.

Achilles Tendon Injury to Maloney

Cincinnati pitcher Jim Maloney will be lost to the Reds for at least 60 days after rupturing the achilles tendon in his left leg. The mishap came in the third inning when Maloney tried to run from home after hitting to the Dodgers' shortstop in the teams' game,

Thursday night in Cincinnati. The sequence of photos above show him pulling up lame on the infield grass and being assisted from the field and then carried to the clubhouse. He was to be operated on sometime Friday. (UPI)

Cincinnati Rookie Tosses Mates a Relief Victory

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
Associated Press Sports Writer

Don Gullett was drafted last June but his pitching has just been classified 1-A.

That's because the 19-year-old left-hander was drafted by a baseball team—the Cincinnati Reds—and the rest of the National League is on the receiving end of his meteoric rise to stardom.

"In time, he'll be nothing but a star. We're seeing a star being born right before our eyes," said manager Sparky Anderson after Gullett picked up his first major league victory with five scoreless innings of three-hit relief and got the win in Cincinnati's 12-2 romp over Los Angeles Thursday night.

"He'll have his bad outings in the future, sure, but he can't miss being a great one."

Those are strong words of praise for a rookie less than a year out of McKell High School in Lynn, Ky., who made only 11 appearances in the low minors before he was added to the Reds' roster just before opening day.

But the figures back him up. Gullett has pitched 6 1/3 innings in three big league games, allowing four hits, no runs, four walks and four strikeouts.

Elsewhere in the NL, San Francisco outslugged Houston 11-9 in 10 innings. San Diego topped Atlanta 5-4 in 10, Pittsburgh beat the New York Mets 7-4 and the Chicago Cubs nipped Philadelphia 6-5, also in 10 innings. St. Louis and Montreal were idle.

In the American League, it was Washington 4, Baltimore 2; Boston 2, New York Yankees 5; Detroit 4, Cleveland 2; Kansas City 8, Milwaukee 6; Oakland 3, Chicago White Sox 1 and California 3, Minnesota 2.

Gullett, who has been likened to Sandy Koufax at a comparable age by Cincinnati's scouting supervisor Cliff Alexander, was an all-round athlete in high school. In his senior year he was 9-2 with 120 strikeouts in 52 innings and hurled a perfect game, fanning 20 of the 21 batters.

Gullett was an all-round athlete Thursday night, too. He walked and stole a base to ignite a five-run uprising in the fifth inning and touched off a three-run rally in the sixth with a triple. Lee May capped the five-run inning with a grand slam and Tony Perez hit a two-run homer in the eighth.

Gullett's performance was especially welcome because the Reds lost right-hander Jim Maloney, who ruptured the Achilles tendon in his left leg in the third inning and was placed on the 60-day disabled list.

San Francisco's M. Squad powered the Giants past Houston. Willie Mays tied the game with a two-run homer in the eighth inning—his first of the season and 601st of his career—and Willie McCovey won it with a two-run shot in the 10th. Tito Fuentes also connected for the Giants while Denis Menke and Jim Wynn homered for the Astros.

Atlanta's Phil Niekro, knocking his way toward his first win for seven innings, wound up instead with his third loss. Nate Colbert wiped out a 4-1 Brave lead with a three-run homer in the eighth following two-out singles by Van Kelly and Clarence Gaston and pinch hitter Ivan Murrell homered in the 10th to win it.

Pittsburgh saw the Mets score four times in the sixth inning to tie the score—Cleon Jones' bases-loaded triple was the key blow—but the Pirates moved right back in front in the seventh on RBI singles by Jose Pagan and Roberto Clemente. Al Oliver homered in the eighth to close out the scoring.

Randy Hundley's 10th-inning single with bases loaded snapped a 5-5 tie—the Phillies scored a run in the ninth to tie it—and gave the Cubs their third straight triumph. Billy Williams homered for the Cubs and Deron Johnson for the Phillies, who have lost five in a row after a promising start.

Frank Howard Blasts O's; Coleman Scatters 7 Hits

By TOM SALADINO

Associated Press Sports Writer
Baltimore Manger Earl Weaver had minor surgery performed earlier in the day and then the Washington Senators ruined his night as massive Frank Howard and stylish Joe Coleman Jr. successfully operated on his Orioles.

With Howard poling his second homer of the year and Coleman adding a key double, in addition to twirling a neat seven-bitter, the Senators swept to a 4-2 victory over the Orioles Thursday night.

In other American League contests, California ended Minnesota's unbeaten streak at five, whipping the Twins 3-2. Oakland stopped Chicago 3-1. Kansas City belted Milwaukee 8-6. Detroit edged Cleveland 4-2 and Boston stopped New York 8-5.

In the National League, Pittsburgh defeated New York 7-4. Cincinnati bombed Los Angeles 12-2. Chicago nipped Philadelphia 6-5. San Diego tripped Atlanta 5-4 and San Francisco dropped Houston 11-9, the latter three games in 10 innings.

Weaver, bothered by a sore throat in the spring, had a cyst removed from his vocal cords Thursday. Although his voice was weaker, it didn't stop the peppery pilot from whispering a complaint.

Weaver put his limited vocal powers to use in the third inning and got an out call on the Orioles' Don Buford reversed when the umpire apparently was obscured on a bobble by Senators' first baseman Mike Epstein. Weaver protested to another arbiter, who had a clear view of the play, and he changed the decision.

However, it was in vain as Howard clinched the Senators third straight triumph with his two-run blast in the third inning after Coleman had driven in the Senators first two runs with a bloop double to right field.

Coleman, a 23-year-old right-hander, evened his record at 1-1, and sent the Orioles to their second straight loss after five victories. Coleman, 1-6 lifetime against Baltimore prior to Thursday, struck out two and walked four.

Ken Tatum's clutch relief pitching and a three-run fourth inning enabled the Angels to end Minnesota's streak. Tatum stopped Twins' eight-inning uprising after Harmon Killebrew had opened with a single and was tripled home by Tony Oliva.

After another walk by starter and winner Rudy May, Tatum came on and got Leo Cardenas to hit into a double play and struck out George Mitterwald.

Sandy Alomar's perfect squeeze bunt capped the three-run Angel spurt.

John "Blue Moon" Odom scattered six hits and was backed by Oakland's 10-hit attack in the A's victory. Odom, 2-1, struck out eight and walked two. Chicago's lone run came on a 450-foot homer by Buddy Bradford.

The A's got single runs in the third, fifth and sixth innings, with Felipe Alou and Rick Monday keying the attack with three hits apiece. Monday scored one run and knocked in another with Dick Green also driving in a tally.

Lou Piniella's three-run homer and Moe Drabowsky's strong relief pitching enabled the Royals to hold off Milwaukee. Piniella's third-inning homer gave Kansas City a 6-2 edge and Amos Otis knocked in the decisive two runs an inning later.

The Brewers got to within 8-6 when Drabowsky came on to get the last seven outs and preserve the victory for Bill Butler.

Dick McAuliffe's solo homer and a run-scoring single provided the difference in the Tigers' victory and Earl Wilson survived a shaky start to gain his first triumph of the year.

The Red Sox swept their three-game series with the Yankees, capped by Mike Andrews' pop fly single in the eighth inning, sparking a four-run rally.

Rico Petrocelli drove in four runs with a homer and sacrifice fly. Andrews also chipped in with a homer. Bobby Murcer had two RBIs for New York.

Larry Owings Loses Match In AAU Meet

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—Larry Owings, Washington U. sophomore who posted one of the season's stunning wrestling upsets three weeks ago, suffered a first round reversal in the National AAU Freestyle Championships Thursday.

Owings suffered a neck injury during a match with Jim Pond of Oregon State, rallied for a near pin but lost on points 12-7.

Late last month Owings snapped a 181-win string for Iowa State's Dan Gable in the NCAA championships at Evanston, Ill.

Gable outpointed the Army's Glen Younger 12-0 in his initial AAU test here Thursday.

Pro Basketball Series Resume

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

Richie Guerin gets a chance to practice what he preaches while Spencer Haywood tries a new experience tonight in the National and American Basketball Association playoffs.

Player-coach Guerin, a play-off veteran in both roles, is set to play for the Atlanta Hawks against the Lakers in Los Angeles in their best-of-7 NBA Eastern Division final series which the Lakers lead 2-0.

Lew Alcindor, Haywood's NBA counterpart as rookie of the year, will try to get the Milwaukee Bucks back into their Eastern Division final set against the New York Knicks. The Knicks take a 2-0 lead into the game at Milwaukee.

Haywood leads the Denver Rockets. ABA Western Division champion, against the Washington Caps in one of three first-round games. In the others the Los Angeles Stars are at the Dallas Chaparrals and the New York Nets are at the Kentucky Colonels. The Indiana Pacers, Eastern Division winners, entertain the Carolina Cougars Saturday. Each series is the best-of-7.

Guerin is inserting himself into the Hawks' line-up as playmaker because Walt Hazzard fractured his wrist in Tuesday night's 105-94 loss.

"I think I can do the job," the 37-year-old Guerin said Thursday. "Walt has run our offense all season, and I feel I'm the only person around who knows how to run it as well."

Rookie Butch Beard is available to spell Guerin.

Besides having leadership problems, the Hawks must stop the scoring of Jerry West and Elgin Baylor and the shooting and rebounding of Wilt Chamberlain.

Alcindor has been impressive in the Bucks' first two games but he has not been dominating because of the play of New York center Willis Reed. So, the Bucks need the outside firepower of Flynn Robinson and Jon McGlocklin, something that was missing in the first two games.

Reed's play has been complemented by the Knicks' outside shooting, their bench and defense.

Haywood, who recently signed a six-year contract for $1.9 million, led Denver's surge to the top of its division with a league-leading 2,519 points and 1,637 rebounds. Washington hopes to offset Haywood with the shooting of Rick Barry, a veteran of playoff competition with San Francisco in the NBA.

Offensive balance is Dallas' ace in the hole. Glen Combs leads the Chaps' attack with a 22.2 average, followed by Cincy. Powell, 20.1; Manny Leaks, 18.7, and John Beasley, 18.3. Rookies Mack Calvin and Willie Wise have provided the spark for Los Angeles.

Shooting Lavern Tart leads the Nets against Kentucky, which counts heavily on two players who starred in college in the state—Darrel Carrier of Western Kentucky and Louie Dampier of the University of Kentucky.

Jr. B.R. Tryouts Will Be Staged

Junior Babe Ruth League tryouts will be held Saturday and Sunday beginning at 1 p.m. in Centennial Park, according to an announcement by John Cook of that organization Thursday.

All boys interested in playing Jr. Babe Ruth ball and who are not listed on a team's roster, must try out to be eligible to play.

Ann Landers

Words As Anchors Hooks For Doubts

Dear Ann Landers: Each of us needs outside emotional support — bits and pieces of philosophy, some wise words we can use as anchors, hooks on which to hang our doubts. Recently, I ran across this little essay — author unknown. It has helped me over some rough roads. I carry it in my wallet and read it every day. Because it has served me so well, I want to share it with others. Will you help by printing it in your column?

JUST FOR TODAY I will live through the next 12 hours and not tackle my whole life problem at once.

JUST FOR TODAY I will improve my mind. I will learn something useful. I will read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

JUST FOR TODAY I will be agreeable. I will look my best, speak in a well modulated voice, be courteous and considerate.

JUST FOR TODAY I will not find fault with friend, relative or colleague. I will not try to change or improve anyone but myself.

JUST FOR TODAY I will have a program. I might not follow it exactly, but I will have it. I will save myself from two enemies — hurry and indecision.

JUST FOR TODAY I will exercise my character in three ways. I will do a good turn and keep it a secret. If anyone finds out, it won't count.

JUST FOR TODAY I will do two things I don't want to do, just for exercise.

JUST FOR TODAY I will be unafraid. Especially will I be unafraid to enjoy what is beautiful and believe that as I give to the world, the world will give to me. — O. City

Dear O. City: You've given something to approximately 54 million people today. In behalf of them as well as myself, I thank you.

Dear Ann Landers: I am a divorced woman with an 11-year-old daughter. The man I am going with is also divorced. He was married to my first cousin. My daughter looks so much like my fiancé's ex-wife it is wild. Everyone remarks on it. He dislikes the girl which is easy to understand. She senses his feelings, of course, and when he comes to the house she stays in her room and refuses to come out, even for meals.

I love this man and he loves me. My daughter is our only problem. He says we should not let her stand in our way and ruin our chances for a good life together. He keeps telling me

Graduation Present Is Joblessness

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Miss Tricia Hines of Swampscott, Mass., got her wings as a Trans World Airlines hostess this week but it will be a while before she gets to fly.

Along with 106 other members of this week's graduating class at the airline's training facility in suburban Overland Park, Kan., Tricia was laid off because of the cut-back in flight schedules caused by the "sick-in" by members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers.

Harold Mason, director of training at the academy, told the graduates the furlough is temporary and asked them to look on it as a semester break.

"It's a big disappointment when you get your wings and you're not able to fly," Miss Hines said. "We were briefed about it last week and were told in our last class that we would be furloughed—so it really wasn't a surprise, but it was a disappointment."

Miss Hines said the majority of her class was to have been stationed in New York to prepare for working on the 747 jumbo jets which will carry 15 hostesses each.

"That is what I want to fly," she said.

Mrs. Georganne MacNab, director of in-flight service training at the academy, said the academy will continue to admit classes but they probably will receive furloughs until the controllers dispute is resolved.

Held for Murder

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP) — Gerard A. Brian, 25, a native of France, Wednesday was bound over for trial in Howell County circuit court on a charge of first degree murder.

Brian is accused of shooting Edward Davis, his stepfather, with a .22 caliber rifle on the Davis farm near Koshkonong, Mo., on March 31.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wool production in the United States last year dropped to the lowest level in nearly a century, according to Agriculture Department records.

The 1969 output, including wool from slaughtered sheep and lambs, totaled 183 million pounds, the Crop Reporting Board announced. Shorn wool accounted for 165.9 million pounds, or the least since 1873, records showed.

Last year's production was down 8 per cent from 1968 and reflected a steady decline in sheep and lamb numbers the past decade. In 1966 there were more than 33 million head on the nation's farms. Last Jan. 1 there were 20.4 million.

Despite some improvement in wool prices last year and a federal "incentive" program which provides payments to growers, the outlook for larger production is dim.

The wool incentive program originally was set up by Congress in 1954 to boost annual output to 300 million pounds but the goal has never been reached.

Wool payments for 1969 production are being made this month to producers and are expected to total about $52 million, compared with $54 million for 1969 marketings.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Strong demand and improved prices have helped cut into the soybean stockpile held under loan programs by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

The Agriculture Department's grain stocks report for last month showed 117 million bushels still under price support loans by March 31, compared with more than 302 million a year earlier.

Farmers actually had more than 178 million bushels of their 1969 soybean crop under loan during the month but had redeemed about 61 million bushels, the report said.

Producers have the option of receiving price support loans on a crop and later deciding on the basis of market prices, usually, whether to pay off the loans and sell grain themselves or let it remain for the CCC to assume ownership.

Picket Public Housing

Forrest Stark, a member of Bricklayers Local 24, walks the picket line alone Thursday, but earlier had been one of 20 union men protesting "substandard wages" and the use of imported non-union labor on the Sedalia public housing project at 24th Street and Engineer. Clay Masonry is the company sub-contracted by AMCON International, of Memphis, Tenn., to do the bricklaying work on the project. (Democrat-Capitol Photo)

Workers representing various unions began picketing the site of Sedalia's public housing project at 24th and Engineer Streets Thursday and plan to continue their protest "as long as necessary until AMCON changes their policy," according to Dean Edwards, president of the Sedalia Building and Trades Council. Work was continuing despite the picket line, however.

At issue is the use of out-of-town non-union labor by AMCON, the Memphis, Tenn., company contracted to do the work on both the Engineer and Saline housing projects. Union leaders also charged the company with paying substandard wages.

Forrest Stark, a member of the Bricklayers Local number 24 and one of 20 union men on the picket line, said, "There's a lot of labor available in this town, but they haven't tried to get it because they don't want to pay union scale wages."

"Labor has bent over backwards trying to get along with them," Edwards said. "We've met with them, talked to them, but they act like they don't want to cooperate."

The foreman at the Engineer project refused to comment on the picket line, but one non-union bricklayer, Franklin Cunningham of Memphis, said he was satisfied with the wages he was receiving. Other workers on the project said they were from Tennessee and Alabama.

AMCON's construction manager for the two projects, S. P. Warren, declined to say whether the company was paying union wages. "We're paying the legal rate according to the government. We pay a scale advisable by the federal labor board," he said.

Asked about reports that laborers were being paid daily and in cash, with no social security or tax deductions, Warren said, "We did give some of the men an advance on their salaries, because they needed the money, but they're not being paid in cash."

Despite the fact that the majority of the workers on the project were imported from the South, Warren said, "Our plans are to use as much local help as possible. We're doing everything possible to get local labor. We don't anticipate trouble and we're not looking for trouble, but if we can't get local help, then we have no alternative but to try and get help from the areas as close to Sedalia as possible."

On the issue of non-union labor, Warren said, "We're not prejudiced against anyone regardless of race, color or creed. We expect to use both union and non-union workers."

Mayor Ralph Walker plans to meet with the Sedalia Housing Authority as soon as possible in an attempt to settle the dispute. "I'm pretty upset about it. They promised they would use local labor on this project. All of us are disappointed that AMCON has brought in these people. It is contrary to our negotiations, but we will do our best to solve this thing," Walker said.

Elsewhere, Missouri Senator Thomas F. Eagleton announced Thursday that the city of Marshall would receive a grant for $1,759,000 from the Department of Housing and Urban Development for the construction of 90 low rent public housing units, 48 for the elderly, in that city.

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)—The Apollo 13 pilots, four harried days behind them, sped into the last 100,000 miles home Thursday, their cold and ailing spaceship aimed at a Friday splashdown in the Pacific Ocean.

Their speed was picking up in answer to earth's gravity—and they ironed out plans for a possible last-minute thruster jolt to aim their ship more precisely for landing.

For the astronauts, James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W. Haise Jr. and Jack L. Swigert Jr., the small course correction scheduled for 7:53 a.m. EST Friday is intended only to refine the ship's aim. It is already on a path that would land it in the Pacific without further adjustment.

The crippled Apollo 13 came within 100,000 miles of earth at precisely 5:13 p.m. EST Thursday.

The 50-degrees chill forced the astronauts to put on extra underwear and sleep huddled on the floor of the lunar lander, the warmest place they have.

With their home planet looming larger in their windows, the astronauts kidded about the cold in the cabin now reaching to some 45 degrees.

"Now you see why we call it the refrigerator," Swigert called down.

"Yeah, it's kind of a cold winter day up there, isn't it?" Mission Control said. "Is it snowing in the command module yet?"

"No, not quite," Swigert replied.

Mission Control assured them lightly that "you'll have some time on the beach in Samoa to thaw out after this cold experience."

"That sounds great," Swigert said.

The astronauts are expected to be back in Houston sometime Sunday morning.

On the ground experts set up a tentative schedule for the morning's events. The timetable:

7:07 a.m. EST—Six hours before splashdown. Crew mans command ship.

8:23 a.m.—Jettison of crippled service module and attempt to photograph it.

11:53 a.m.—Jettison lunar lander.

12:53 p.m.—Begin re-entry period; altitude 400,000 feet.

1:07 p.m.—Splashdown.

The astronauts were told to make the re-entry in light coveralls, leaving their heavy space suits in storage. All Apollo flights to date have made these so-called shirt-sleeve re-entries.

Going over the last minute details, Lovell told Mission Control that as soon as he finished maneuvering with the lunar lander's thrusters before re-entry Friday, "I'll scramble up and close the LM hatch."

Mission Control approved his recital of the plan but added, "Don't forget to close the command module hatch on your way in."

"I'm already scared that Jack will have it closed before I get up there," Lovell said.

It was one of the few light moments since Monday night's spaceship-crippling accident.

"We have a lot of work to do because we have an unusual situation," explained Donald K. (Deke) Slayton, chief of the astronauts. Once re-entry procedures are perfected, he said, he would not be concerned about bringing the crew down safely.

To insure that safety, the crew of the next Apollo flight

Library Work Near Completion

The major part of a $23,000 remodeling project at the Sedalia Public Library is expected to be completed within two weeks, Don Morton, head librarian, said Thursday.

The work began about the middle of March and Morton moved back into his office Monday after most of the work was completed there.

The west wing of the library, formerly the children's section, is being converted to a periodical section and will include a secretary's office and microfilm room.

The children's section is being moved to the bottom floor of the library, where an adult's non-fiction room is also being located.

The board of directors met Wednesday and accepted a bid estimate for the shelves to be placed in the new rooms. Morton said earlier that the actual construction costs for the work was estimated at $19,000

Town & Country to Close Plant

About 600 Sedalians have or will have lost their jobs by the end of this week due to a labor-management dispute which has crippled the trucking industry, it was learned today.

Town & Country Shoes, Inc., will close the doors of its Sedalia plant Friday, it was reported by Henry Mayhall. He said about 400 people would be affected by the move.

Parkhurst Manufacturing Co. laid off 200 of its workers at 8 a.m. today. William R. Parkhurst, president of the firm announced.

The action was taken by both manufacturers because supplies necessary for production could no longer be obtained.

Other major industries in Sedalia have reported that although they have not been seriously affected yet, it might be just a matter of time until they might have to cut back production.

The Town & Country move is the most drastic so far in Sedalia. Mayhall said that he had personally transported supplies in order to keep the local plant operative. He indicated, however, that supplies were not available to the firm in the quantities needed.

Mayhall was in the Warrensburg plant of Town & Country when contacted Thursday. The Warrensburg plant was still in operation, but it could not be determined how long this would last.

At Parkhurst, employees received a letter from the firm's president, stating: "You have my personal assurance that we will begin full-scale production at the earliest possible moment."

The lay-off involves 100 part-time student employees working a 5 to 10 p.m. shift in the trailer assembly plant, and 100 full-time employees in the van body plant. In the latter case, two shifts were involved, resulting in the complete shutdown of that plant. Supervisory personnel were not affected.

The trailer assembly plant is still in operation with one shift of full time employees continuing work, Ron Jones, personnel manager, said.

The 200 people affected by the lay-off represent only 30 per cent of the over-all labor force at Parkhurst, Jones added.

Referring to the trucking strike, Parkhurst said in the letter: "While most major industries have already been severely crippled, I had hoped that this dispute could be settled before we were adversely affected. We have arrived, however, at the point where continued production in certain areas is impossible due to this extreme shortage of supplies. It is, therefore, with every bit of reluctance that we are forced to close certain of our production facilities until further notice."

The supplies referred to in the letter are mainly steel.

WEATHER

Showers and thundershowers are likely today with a high from the low 60's to the low 70's. It should be milder tonight with showers ending. The overnight low should be around 40. Partly cloudy and warmer weather is forecast for Saturday.

The sun will set tonight at 6:51 and rise Saturday morning at 5:33.

Budget Director Details State's Gloomy Outlook

JEFFERSON CITY (AP)—The House Appropriations Committee got its first look Thursday at the fiscal facts of life as presented by John C. Vaughn, state comptroller and budget director.

At the end, Chairman E. J. Cantrell, D-Overland, said the committee would start work Monday to develop a budget within the $626.2 million estimated by Vaughn as the general revenue total available for the 1970-71 fiscal year.

Vaughn estimated the state will have a general revenue balance of $1.5 million at the end of the fiscal year June 30 and he said that will put the state "on very thin ice."

He said it would be "touch and go right up to June 30 to meet our projections" of $640 million available to meet this year's appropriations.

The detailed budget figures will not be printed until Monday. They will include the breakdown on Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' recommendation for a $1.4 billion budget, including $618.3 million from general revenue or about $20 million less than for this year.

Based on Vaughn's estimates, that would leave an operating balance of $7.9 million at the end of the 1970-71 fiscal year.

Vaughn pointed out the legislature in the past has tried to maintain an operating balance of around $20 million. A 1 per cent change in the projections would mean $6 million less if any slowdown in the economy occurs.

Vaughn explained this year's revenue estimates were based on an assumption that total collections would increase normally by 6.7 per cent. The 1970-71 projections are based on a 7.5 per cent growth.

Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, has challenged Vaughn's figures and said this year's growth actually would be 10 per cent. Vaughn denied this.

Cantrell noted the charges that have been made and the claims that more money is available than shown in the budget summary. He said the "people of Missouri are confused and some members of the legislature are confused."

But, Vaughn said, any talk of a "pipeline" containing undeposited state collections is ridiculous.

"I'm not aware of one dime that is not being collected and deposited," he said.

Vaughn estimated receipts from accelerated tax collections this year will be about $49 million but this money source will not be available for the new budget.

He also noted that collections from an increase in the cigarette tax from 4 cents to 9 cents a package, voted by the 1969 legislature for state aid to schools, will produce only $47 million this year, or $9 million short of the original estimate.

On a 4 cents a package basis, the tax produced about $24.5 million in the 1968-69 fiscal year.

On the second day of the special session, legislators were confronted by a delegation of about 500 teachers from the Kansas City and St. Louis areas demanding full financing of the school program.

Union Protest At Public Housing Site

Suggests Compromise

President Nixon asked Congress Thursday to put the nation's postal service on a patronage-free basis and to raise mailmen's pay, but scaled down to eight cents his previous request for a 10-cent first class letter rate. With the President are labor leaders and member of the Senate Post Office Committee and Postmaster General Winton Blount, far right. (UPI)

Unveils New Postal Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Nixon unveiled Thursday a compromise plan to reform the postal system, give more pay to mail handlers, and avoid a 10-cent letter charge.

Nixon pared down his rate request to eight cents, a two-cent increase over the present rate. The package, largely worked out by federal and union negotiators, was designed to improve chances of congressional and public approval.

AFL-CIO President George Meany, appearing before newsmen at the White House, was one of the first to jump on the bandwagon, declaring, "This is one of the most significant events in the history of collective bargaining."

As part of a compromise, Nixon not only revised postal rate increases he proposed just two weeks ago but also abandoned his 1969 plan to turn the Post Office Department into an independent corporation.

The key to the latest reform idea would be creation of a United States Postal Service that would be insulated from political pressures and patronage while remaining a part of the executive branch.

Other principal features of the package program:

—Postal workers would get an 8 per cent pay increase, over and above the 6 per cent governmentwide increase Nixon signed into law Wednesday, and would reach top pay scales in eight years instead of the current 21 years.

—The postal workers would bargain collectively with the proposed postal service over wages, hours and working conditions generally, with negotiating impasses being finally resolved, if necessary, by binding arbitration.

—Postal rates would be increased, but by considerably less in the aggregate than Nixon had recommended on April 3.

—The Post Office Department would no longer be a Cabinet-level agency and the postmaster general would be hired by a bipartisan commission with his tenure "based on performance and not on politics."

—The commissioners would have broad authority to fix postal rates and pay scales but either house of Congress could veto proposed rate changes by a two-thirds vote.

The Post Office Department after 1977 would receive no federal funds except in the form of public service subsidies covering such items as postage-free mailings.

Mayor's Statement On Anti-ABM Rally

Mayor Ralph Walker and the Sedalia Park Board issued statements Thursday outlining their respective positions on the anti-ABM rally scheduled for Liberty Park this Saturday.

Walker said many of the people coming to the rally will be bringing their wives and children and plan to cause no trouble. He stressed that these people should be treated like any other visitors to the community.

"Since Sedalia has been chosen as the site for this rally for those who desire to express their thoughts, we will not interfere in any way," the Mayor said.

He reported that reports were coming into his office about groups of local people who plan to disrupt the meeting.

"Although we expect this rally to be entirely peaceful, we have made plans and are prepared to deal with any situation that might arise," Walker said.

The Mayor commended law enforcement groups for having well-organized plans to stifle any trouble. "Any individual or group who makes any effort to disrupt this peaceful rally and turn it into one of violence will be dealt with immediately and effectively," he said.

Walker concluded that "If trouble does erupt let us as residents of Sedalia be absolutely sure that it came from without rather than from our own people."

A. A. Taylor, president of the Park Board, announced that no

Crossroads Comment...

Why do a lot of dumbheads want to use Sedalia as a platform for their objections to a proposed area expansion plan for ABM missiles?

The question has arisen in numerous discussions about the protest demonstration scheduled here Saturday afternoon.

To start off with, young and older people who initiated the idea of having a meeting here are not dumbheads, neither are they intellectuals. Rather, they are ordinary human beings like the rest of us. They just have a different opinion about the ABMs in about the same degree as other groups who are not opposed to the ABM installation.

So what's wrong about having differences of opinion on public matters such as this very one which drew a crowd to the court house Tuesday night without any turbulent overtones? Everyday we disagree with each other on matters pertaining to our business or domestic establishments where violence has no place although it sometimes breaks out unexpectedly.

That is what is causing concern about the ABM demonstration scheduled Saturday. Area originators of this protest meeting are mostly exponents of peace and are as much interested in keeping it during the Saturday meeting as anyone else in Sedalia. Since they planned the meeting they should voluntarily and collectively assume major responsibility for influencing their fellow compatriots to "keep the cool" while in Sedalia or be disavowed as illegitimate participants in the dialogue they came to hear.

A major difficulty in accomplishing this purpose, however, is presented by the anticipated influx of strangers not only from all parts of Missouri, including particularly the metropolitan areas, but also from far away places. Many verbal protest movements have been disrupted heretofore by small segments of excessively emotional persons indoctrinated with some irrational isms looking for a fertile spot to spawn violence among others while they back off from it themselves.

Anyone who has such temperamental compulsions are reminded to confer first with the local leaders who planned Saturday's ABM meeting and be persuaded that anything beyond verbal protest here is unwelcome and destructive of the purposes for which the demonstration was arranged.

Visitors who may be afflicted with tender sensibilities are reminded that the appearance of law enforcement officers in and around the area of ABM festivities should not feel oppressed, persecuted or denied their constitutional rights.

Presence of the disciples of law and order invites mutual respect from all citizens who may find it convenient to be out on the streets of Sedalia Saturday.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

The White House Versus the Senate

WASHINGTON — President Nixon's immediate reaction, upon learning that the Senate for the second time had rejected his Supreme Court nominee, was to put through a telephone call to his former law partner, trusted adviser and political confidant, Attorney General John Mitchell.

Those who heard the conversation would tell this column only that the President used some hotly "descriptive terms" to express what he thought of the United States Senate.

Significantly, he waited 24 hours before he made his anger public over the rejection of G. Harrold Carswell. There was nothing at all impulsive about his decision to attack the Senate.

After his phone call to Mitchell, the President holed up in his private hideaway in the Executive Office Building across the parking lot from the White House to sort out his thoughts.

Then he again telephoned Mitchell, who broke away from a staff meeting to take the call. Nixon asked the Attorney General to join him for an evening cruise on the presidential yacht Sequoia.

As they glided down the Potomac in the moonlight, they agreed to hit back at the Senate. They met again at the White House the next day before the President at last broke into the press rooms and with quick, cold rhetoric, issued his declaration of political warfare against the Senate.

—Nixon's Resentment—

For months, Richard Nixon has been smoldering over what he believes to be the Senate's aim to thwart a reorganization of the Supreme Court. Again and again, he has complained bitterly to aides that Senate liberals would oppose anyone he appointed to the Court.

In the President's view, the Supreme Court's emphasis on civil liberties at the expense of public order has created a permissive atmosphere in this country, which has encouraged criminals and dissidents. This lenient attitude, he feels, has led to a breakdown of law and order.

Reshaping the Supreme Court, therefore, has been one of his most urgent objectives. To fill the vacancies, he has sought "strict constructionists" whose judicial philosophy had been thoroughly tested. He emphasized to aides that he wanted to take no chances on another Earl Warren, whose constitutional views were unknown when President Eisenhower appointed him to the high court.

Nixon asked his Attorney General to prepare an exhaustive study of the judicial records of outstanding federal judges who seemed to meet the right criterion. Mitchell dug into the rulings and opinions of more than 160 prospects, and the President personally reviewed the records of about 100.

These were weeded down to less than a dozen, which included Judges Warren Burger, Clement Haynsworth and Carswell. After Burger's appointment as Chief Justice, the President looked over the list for a younger man, preferably a Southerner who would give more geographical balance to the Court.

—Secret Speech—

His choice of Haynsworth brought unexpected opposition that got the President's back up. At a White House strategy session on October 14, 1969, according to the confidential minutes, he delivered an impassioned little speech to party leaders.

"The Court is unbalanced!" he declared. "Haynsworth is the best judge in his age group. He had followed the law of the land. On the qualifications, I am for him. On these ethical problems, all these problems are troublesome. Some objections are ideological, some sectional, some go to his judgment."

"They will attack all my appointments to the Court. I will myself there is no question of ethics or violations of the law. Also, I hold in my hands the fate of a man. I will not be a party to destroying a man."

"Given the present situation, unless some new facts come in, I will stick by Haynsworth even if he gets only one vote. Will I withdraw him? I will not."

The President's bitterness over Haynsworth's rejection built up to outrage over Carswell's defeat. What the Senate really wants, Nixon is now convinced, is to be consulted in advance on Supreme Court nominees. Thereby, he believes, Senate liberals seek to prevent any change in the liberal make-up of the Court.

Inside the Senate cloakrooms, however, no Senator has been heard to question the President's right to name a Southern "strict constructionist" to the Court. They objected only to Haynsworth's conflicts and Carswell's mediocrity.

The President's own spokesmen in the Senate, GOP leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and assistant leader Robert Griffin of Michigan, voted against Haynsworth. They gave the President their word that they would support Carswell after receiving assurances he was a racial moderate and distinguished jurist with clean hands.

Both stuck to their word although they felt they had been misled about Carswell's qualifications. On the eve of the Senate vote, they met with White House aide Kenneth Belieu. Griffin asked him pointblank whether he could think of anything more they could do to win confirmation for Carswell. Belieu agreed they had done all in their power.

Nevertheless, unaccountably, the President is as peeved with his own leaders as he is outraged at the Democrats. The guantlet is down. It is now the White House vs. The Senate.

—World Environment—

The Senate's "Mr. Consumer," Warren Magnuson, D-Wash., has been working for months in secret on a proposal for a "World Environmental Institute" which would include Red China and other non-UN nations.

Magnuson has privately circulated a draft Senate resolution calling for invitation of all nations "not presently members of the general assembly" to the UN-sponsored Stockholm environmental conference in 1972.

There, if the Senate and the administration agree to the resolution, the U.S. would press for the non-political institute to be formed. Funding and location would be decided there. The functions of the World Environmental Institute would be as a clearing house for pollution information and as a research center.

Thus, a study on detergent pollution made in Chicago would be available to Tokyo, and a study of coal smoke effects made in Peking would be available to the pollution-fighters of Madrid.

First U.S. cabinet appointee rejected by the Senate was Roger Brooke Taney of Maryland, who was proposed by President Andrew Jackson for Secretary of the Treasury.

Looking Backward

NINETY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Were we a property holder on any of the principal streets, Ohio street in particular, we should favor taking down all the wooden awnings. There is no uniformity or symmetry in them, and Ohio street being narrow, the removal of these ungainly projections would add greatly to the attractiveness of that enterprising street.

Carswell: A Nixon Lunge at Wallace

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

With all the millions of words poured out about the rejected Supreme Court nominations of U.S. Judges G. Harrold Carswell and Clement Haynsworth, still not enough has been said regarding President Nixon's motivations in these matters.

All the observable evidence we have—and we really have no other provable means of gauging his intent—indicates that he was bent not just on appointing a conservative to affect the balance of the court, nor even a Southern conservative, but a particular kind of Southern conservative.

He was, plainly, interested in a court nominee who could satisfy a significant segment of the Southern electorate—the George Wallace variety of racial conservatives.

Many of those people voted for Nixon in 1968 (helping him to carry Virginia, the two Carolinas, Tennessee and Florida) partly because he pledged endlessly in his campaign to name a "strict constructionist" to vacancies on the Supreme Court. In their realm this is code for racial, not just general conservatism.

By any fair measure, the President could calculate he owed these voters plenty. Not only did they fatten his electoral total, but their delegates, plus large numbers from the five Deep South states won by Wallace, formed the crucial base of the winning delegate total which nominated Nixon at Miami Beach.

It has never escaped Nixon's acute political perception that if Wallace, currently engaged in a fresh fight for the Alabama governorship, should fade as a segregationist standard bearer in 1970-72, then the President might find the five Wallace states with their 45 electoral votes the easiest pickup he could make in 1972.

Also not forgotten at the White House is the fact Nixon lost Texas' juicy 25 electoral votes in 1968 to Hubert Humphrey by only one percentage point, while Wallace was taking 19 per cent. Any modest part of that latter segment could possibly give Nixon the state in 1972, when it will have 26 electoral votes.

Since none of the five 1968 Wallace states will lose any electoral votes, the President could, by winning them and Texas, make a pickup of 71 electoral votes.

Such a cushion would go far toward absorbing the electoral vote loss he might suffer in 1972 if a Democratic nominee should win any two of the four big states—New Jersey, Ohio, Illinois and California—which Nixon took by narrow margins in 1968. The fear of such loss was great in the Nixon camp until the 1969 Chappaquiddick incident reduced, if it did not eliminate, the chance that Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts would be Nixon's 1972 adversary.

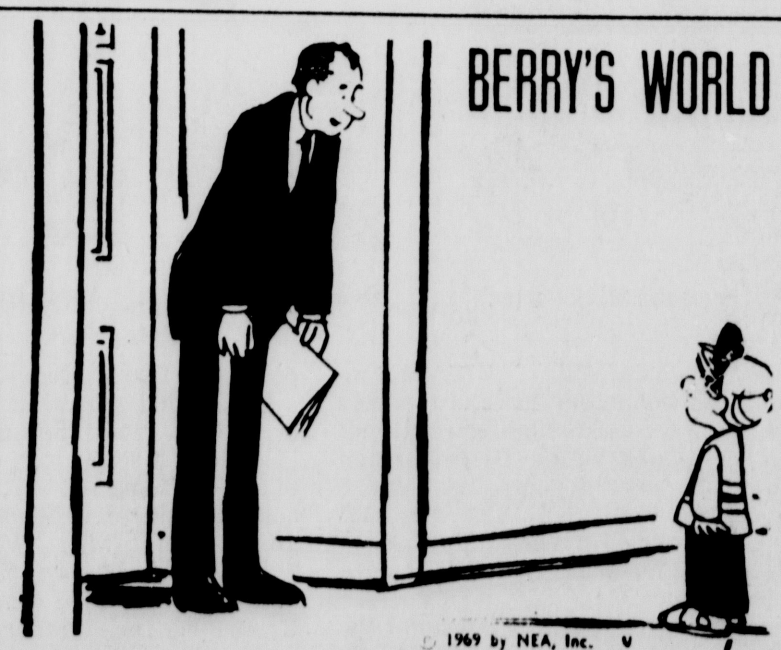

But it would be a mistake, I believe, to suggest that these future calculations were necessarily dominant in the President's search for a suitable Southern conservative for the Supreme Court.

There are other signs, notably his persistent moves to seek new protection for Southern textiles, that indicate Nixon feels a strong sense of obligation to repay past favors and honor campaign pledges.

From late 1966 on, he chose to build toward the nomination from the old 1964 Goldwater base (nearly synonymous with the Wallace base). He sensed the inevitable continuity in the Southern GOP's mood from 1964 to 1968, and accurately gauged that appeals to this base—coupled with detrimental comment about the electability of the then more-favored Gov. Ronald Reagan of California—could get him off to a fast start toward nomination. Big pledges to the racial conservatives were vital to getting and holding that support.

Carswell at first seemed perfect payment on one key pledge. But, whatever the facts, inquiry opened him to effective attack as a possible biased and mediocre judge. Haynsworth, a good jurist and balanced conservative who yet bore the helpful South Carolina imprint, fell by giving an impression of ethical misjudgment.

Nixon has lost two stiff battles which are said to hurt. But in the losing, he may later win the war for the South-erners he wants.

Today's hand appeared in our column back in January. When the hand was actually played West was allowed to hold the first trick. He continued hearts. South ruffed and promptly played out ace and another spade since the game was rubber bridge. He lost the club finesse later on and still made his game.

We pointed out that if East had won the first trick and led back a diamond he would have been able to ruff a diamond and defeat the contract.

PFC John Uhlmann who is on his way to Vietnam wrote us that South could still make his hand by means of a criss-cross squeeze and he is right. We don't like to make mistakes but we do on occasion and this crisscross squeeze is interesting enough to show our readers.

The early play will be a heart, a diamond, two spades, a diamond ruff and a second heart. South will now play all but one trump to leave himself with one diamond, one trump and three clubs. Dummy will hold two hearts, two high diamonds and the ace of clubs. East will hold two hearts and three clubs while West can hold anything he wants to but he won't be taking any tricks.

Now South cashes dummy's two diamonds and discards his small club. Everyone is down to three cards. If East blanks his ace of hearts, South ruffs a heart and makes the last two tricks in dummy. If East blanks his king of clubs, South cashes dummy's ace, ruffs a heart and makes the last trick with the queen of clubs.

We don't consider our failure to point out the squeeze as much of an error. At the table most players would take the simple play of trying the club finesse and go down one, but as PFC. Uhlmann points out the hand could be made by this interesting method.

Greece Is Cozying Up to Moscow

By LEON DENNIS
NEA Foreign News Analyst

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — Because Ioannis Kapsis, the courageous Greek editor, urged the restoration of democracy in his country, an Athens military tribunal sentenced him to five years in prison and closed his 57-year-old newspaper, Ethnos.

The verdict of the "special court" hand-picked by Premier Papadopoulos was hardly a surprise. The strongman of the colonel's junta that now rules Greece has been increasingly resorting to suppression in his desperate efforts to cope with growing internal pressure for political freedom.

According to reports reaching the United Nations, Greece's jails are overcrowded with men and women who defy the junta and challenge its policies. The European Commission on Human Rights has also disclosed that torture and other inhuman acts have been "officially tolerated" by the colonels.

This is more proof — if proof is still needed — that dictators, whether rightists or leftists, are brothers under the skin. They may quarrel and even come to blows on occasions but they are united in their common fear of freedom and human decency.

There is little that the free world can do to bring relief to the people of Russia, Red China, Franco's Spain and Fidel Castro's Cuba.

But Greece is a special problem for NATO and especially the United States. It is one of the few remaining countries where an American is still a welcome friend and not an "imperialist."

More important, Greece is vital to NATO's southern flank.

However, according to George Mylanos, a former deputy prime minister who recently escaped from Greece, American tolerance and even support of Papadopoulos and his junta, is rapidly alienating the Greek people from the United States.

In his view, without America's moral and economic support the dictatorship would not last long.

"I don't say that the United States should intervene to help us — that's out of the question," Mylanos told this writer.

"But the Pentagon should stop intervening in support of the colonels."

The Pentagon has its own military and strategic consideration, of course. But can NATO rely on the loyalty of the junta?

The colonels seized power in 1967 and suppressed democracy ostensibly to prevent a Communist takeover of Greece. But in recent months they have shown increasing interest in collaborating with Moscow.

Understandably, Papadopoulos finds it more congenial to deal with his fellow dictators in the East than with the Western democracies. He has even been asserting lately that communism is no longer a threat to his country.

Thus, on the very day the Council of Europe charged that he was violating human rights, members of the junta and the Russian ambassador in Athens attended a highly publicized ceremony dedicated to Soviet-Greek collaboration.

For the Russians, who seek to become a major power in the Mediterranean, close relations with Greece are a strategic and political asset. They would love to close Greek ports to the U.S. 6th Fleet.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Have 'Spring Fever'? Step Up Exercises

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

If you find yourself yawning a lot, stretching, sighing and suffering from general peevishness but have no fever, you probably have "spring fever." In earlier times the underlying cause was thought to be thickening of the blood during winter. We now know that no such thickening occurs. At any rate, at this time of the year the "disease" reaches epidemic proportions.

Some 50 to 75 years ago, sulfur and molasses was the standard treatment. Since the condition is self-limited the remedy always worked. Perhaps the best treatment is to get out of doors and watch the burgeoning of spring. Step up your exercise program, preferably by doing something you enjoy, whether it be golf or bird watching.

Incidentally, if your enjoyment of the outdoors is hampered by the increasing air pollution, add your voice to the growing demand for cleaner air. Some of our cities have already gotten the message and others will soon have to fall in line. With a little planning spring can become the best and healthiest time of the year.

Q — What is the cause and treatment of Marie-Stumpell's disease?

A — This disease (rheumatoid spondylitis) is a chronic arthritis of the spine. The cause is unknown. Unless steps are taken early in the course of the disease to prevent deformity, the victim becomes unable to straighten up.

Such antirheumatic drugs as phenylbutazone and indomethacin are helpful. The victim must sleep on his back on a hard mattress and must sit only on straight-backed chairs. Back-strengthening exercises, such as lying on your back and raising your legs, or, with your legs anchored under a sofa, rising to a sitting position, are an important part of the treatment.

Q — Sometimes I see what looks like a crooked shimmering mirror in front of my eyes. My doctor says it is nothing to worry about. I may even wake up in the night seeing it. When I shut my eyes it is still there. What causes this?

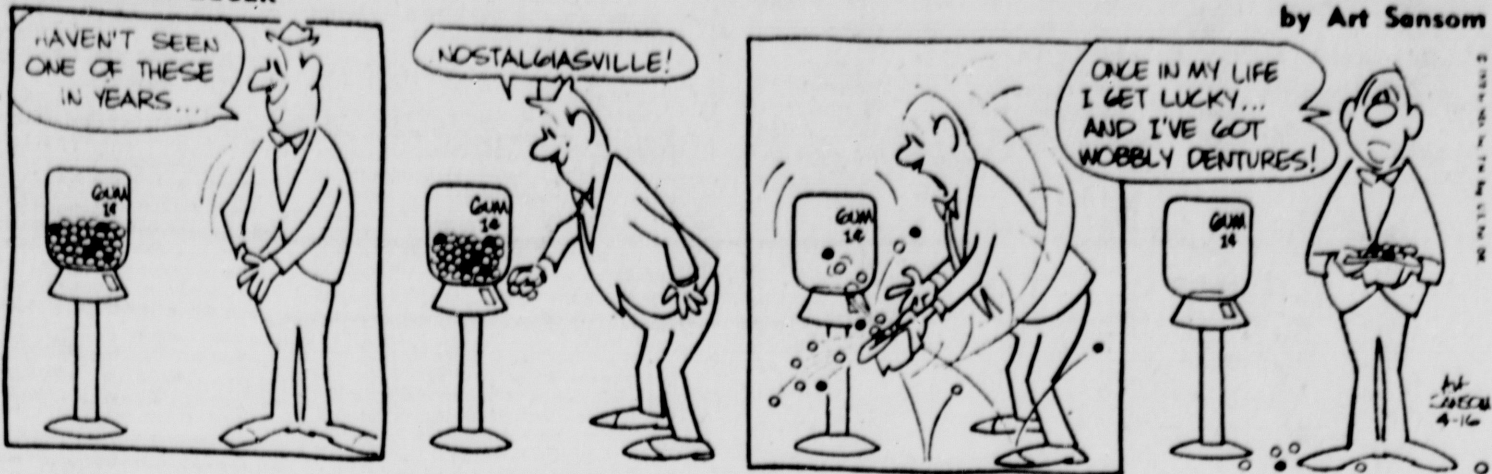

A — This sounds like the visual aura of migraine which may or may not be associated with a severe one-sided headache. The aura usually clears up spontaneously in 30 to 45 minutes. Although this is an annoying symptom your doctor is right — it is not a health hazard.

Dirty Venetian Blinds Are Her Tale of Woe

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—Is there an easy way to clean Venetian blinds? I have tried wiping them with both dry and wet rags and also vacuuming, but both take much time and effort. Help me, please.—ASHIE

DEAR POLLY—Like Laverne, we, too, enjoy having a dog and cat and have only a sliding glass door in our mobile home. To solve the problem of their getting in and out, my husband took a board about eight inches wide, as tall as the doors and cut a pet door seven inches wide at the bottom of the board. After painting this, he slipped it in the opening between the door frame and the door. At night, when we want the door locked, he lays a length of broom handle in the bottom track of the door so it cannot be pushed open. When we leave home, it is easy to remove the board and lock the door. The sliding door holds this board tight and also lets us open the door to go in and out as we wish.—LEONA

DEAR POLLY—Before taking a trip, cut out the part of the map that shows your route and paste this section on a piece of stiff or heavy adhesive-backed paper. It saves a lot of map folding and unfolding.

When packing and you have no luggage rack, set up the ironing board in the bedroom or wherever you are packing, adjust the board to a comfortable height and place your suitcase on it.—ELIZABETH

DEAR POLLY—I find that a pair of curved manicure scissors is a wonderful help when cutting out scallops or curves in cutwork embroidery or any other time a pattern calls for cutting scallops. (Polly's note—I like to use them as regular embroidery scissors—great when any stitches have to be cut or removed.)

I use nylon net to reinforce a hole in a sweater. To prevent puckering, prepare a foundation for darning with a piece of nylon net.—MRS. B. L.

Obituary

Jacob A. Snapp

GREEN RIDGE — Jacob A. Snapp, 90, a long-time resident of Green Ridge, died Wednesday at the Golden Age Nursing Home in Kansas City.

He was born, Nov. 9, 1879, in Sinclair County, the son of the late Woodford and Sally Lacy Snapp. He farmed near Green Ridge, where he was a member of the Christian Church before moving to Kansas City in 1959.

His wife, Mrs. Alama M. Snapp, died in 1959.

Surviving are five daughters, Mrs. Ravena Paxton, Warrensburg; Mrs. Clarence Goldsmith, Windsor; Mrs. David Wear, Shawnee Mission, Kan.; Mrs. Clyde Berry, Kansas City, Kan.; and Mrs. Danny Elliott, Phoenix, Ariz.; two sons, Ralph Snapp, San Bernardino, Calif.; and Edsel Snapp, Kansas City, Kan.; 19 grandchildren and 17 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at the Heck Funeral Home, Green Ridge, with the Rev. Gary Taylor, officiating.

Burial will be in Laurel Oak Cemetery, Windsor.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 to 9 p.m. Friday.

according to Jones. Jones said that General Motors Corp. in St. Louis could not get the steel it needed and as a result Parkhurst could not obtain trucks.

Both Parkhurst and Jones stressed that the lay-off was of a temporary nature and would end as soon as the trucking dispute could be resolved.

Most other major Sedalia manufacturers reported that they could maintain production for about another week. If the trucking strike should last longer, "We're going to be in dire straits," one company representative said.

Klassic Manufacturing Co. reported it was "set for another five or six days" before a real pinch would be felt. "Another week and we may be in trouble," Jim Lewis, president of the firm, said.

Rival Manufacturing Co. representatives said the firm was running short of supplies. The company said it "hoped to go through next week with the majority of the plant" in production. Beyond that, again, spells trouble.

At Olin Conductors, Personnel Manager John Candler reported that the strike was "having an impact" but that no lay-off of personnel was foreseen "in the near future." Olin, like the others, is feeling the pinch of the strike, however.

with the estimate on the shelves making the total cost of the project about $23,000. The board previously set aside $25,000 for the project.

Funds for the remodeling came from the two mill tax levy passed by Sedalia voters two years ago. These funds are to be used explicitly for the library, according to Morton, although they are collected by the city. Morton said the money is kept in a library tax fund.

Actual completion of the project will not be realized until about the middle of May, Morton said, since that is the earliest that new heating units can be obtained from the manufacturer.

Mayor's

official approval by the Board had been given for the use of Liberty Park on Saturday.

Taylor said that this early in the season neither electricity or restroom facilities would be available and a large group would destroy the grass for the summer.

Mayor Walker reported, however, that the sanitary facilities would be open specially for the rally.

"It is impossible to estimate at this particular time of year the damage which could be done to park facilities by a group of this size, and the Board wants it officially understood that the persons involved with the promoting of this gathering will be held morally and legally responsible for any damages incurred by the parks," Taylor said.

Soybean Prices Up On Board of Trade

CHICAGO (AP) — A wave of buying and short covering in the last hour of the session sent soybean oil prices to new highs for the season and a near-limit advance on the Chicago Board of Trade Thursday.

Virtually all commodity futures on the exchange closed on a higher price level. Trade was active and mixed. The most hectic trading pace was again in the soybean oil pit, where 19,346 contracts were traded Wednesday for a new record and about 1,500 contracts more than the previous high.

One reason for the buying interest was some fairly sizeable export business overnight. Then, the government revised its oil stocks report as expected, but the new total was not quite as high as the trade had estimated.

At the close, wheat was 3/4 to 6 1/2 cents a bushel higher, May 1.50; corn was 1/4 to 1/2 higher, May 1.25; oats were 3/4 to 1/2 higher, May 64 cents; rye was 1/4 lower to 1/2 higher, May 1.12; and soybeans were 3/4 to 1 1/2 cents higher, May 2.64.

Special Program At Lions

An anti-litter film, "Keep America Beautiful," was presented to the Lions Club at the Bothwell Hotel at noon Wednesday, by the field representative of the United States Brewers Association, Richard Gergs.

Following the presentation, Gergs said, "People are the only ones who can make America ugly and people are the only ones who can keep it beautiful." He added that the way to control litter is through education and strong anti-litter laws.

Program Chairman George Ray, introduced the speaker.

Chuck Branson was presented a plaque by Conservation Agent Chester Vermaas for being the club's outstanding angler. Branson held the Missouri trout record for 10 years for his 13-pound, 12-ounce rainbow trout caught at Bennett springs.

Guests were Lion Dick Holmes, Kansas City, guest of Bill McLaughlin; Jerry Watson, guest of Herman Wallace, Jr.; student guests Jim Fangohr, Sacred Heart High School; John Ball, Smith-Cotton High School; and Robert Smith, State Fair Community College.

Club President John Mais announced that the door-to-door Lions Broom Sale will be held June 16 and 17.

Touchy

rehearsed the various proposed plans in spaceship simulators on the ground, searching for as practical a test as possible of what would work and what would not.

"We want to get rid of the service module as soon as possible and keep the lunar module as long as possible," Slayton said. "It gets a little sticky at times. But we're going to try to make the re-entry as normal as possible and we've been running through a lot of things on the simulator."

The service module—that now worthless second section of the command ship—was the scene of the Monday night explosion that crippled the spaceship and aborted its mission of landing in the lunar highlands. It houses the ruptured oxygen tank, the dead command ship engine and the power-producing fuel cells.

The lunar module, the two-stage spidery craft joined nose to nose with the command ship, has acted as a lifeboat to bring the astronauts home. Its electricity, oxygen, water and rocket engines have stood between the astronauts and disaster.

Until Wednesday they had been using the command ship with its couches only as a bedroom, but it got too cold to sleep there, and they took the cramped and less comfortable floor of the lunar lander. All power was off in the command ship.

Still, that is the ship that will bring them home, bucking the heat of re-entry with its heat shield. The little lunar lander, when it is jettisoned shortly before, will burn to dust as it plummets toward the Pacific Ocean.

"We were damned concerned Monday night about the crew until we got the situation under control," Slayton said. The last major maneuver so far was Wednesday night's rocket burst that broke them out of a path that would have missed the earth and left them stranded in space.

The new course will bring them to a landing in the Pacific at 1:07 p.m. EST Friday, 580 miles southeast of Samoa.

While space experts pondered the advisability of a fourth but minor course correction, the astronauts rested from the rigors of their flight and kept tab on the consumable items that keep them alive.

There was plenty of everything for the final day in space, providing nothing else goes wrong.

The inventory: Water—enough for 21 hours beyond the end of the mission at current low consumption rates. It is used for cooling.

Oxygen—a safety margin of 105 pounds or 52 hours.

Electricity—a safety margin of 31 hours in low power flight.

Lithium hydroxide—the canisters which remove carbon dioxide from the cabin air, a safety margin of 38 hours.

Re-entry is normally made on the command ship's batteries. The difference this time is that the big service module engine is dead and cannot be used to perform any of the preliminaries to ready the command ship for re-entry.

The last three days of conservation have produced the surpluses in the stricken spacecraft.

The astronauts used flashlights to find their way around in the darkened command ship. Mission Control, checking occasionally by radio, said the command ship's systems were in good shape.

In Houston, the wives of the astronauts Lovell and Haise kept an ear to the latest developments.

Magistrate Court

Gary W. Curry, 19, 617 Wilkerson, charged April 9 with two capital offenses and one lesser charge, was bound over to the September term of Circuit Court Thursday morning following a hearing before Magistrate Judge Frank Armstrong.

Curry was charged with forcible rape and first degree robbery with a dangerous and deadly weapon, both capital offenses, and with first degree robbery in connection with a series of events which occurred on the Robert Bohm and Cebe Brownfield farms on April 8.

Judge Armstrong ruled Thursday that Curry be held without bond on the rape charge, although he had previously set bond on the other charges. Curry will be tried separately on each charge.

They got together for a brunch at the Slayton home. The experts in Mission Control continued to refine the last minute procedures to bring the Apollo spaceship home safely.

The aircraft carrier Iwo Jima set out from Samoa for the recovery site. It is the prime recovery ship in a fleet of ships in the area. The carrier was expected on station early Friday.

The spaceship was at the time still some 140,000 miles out in space, but its speed, answering the beck of earth's gravity, was picking up. It will be traveling at 24,623 miles an hour when it bursts into the earth's atmosphere.

The Soviet Union, which had offered naval help along with Britain, France, Japan and Brazil for the recovery operations, sent four ships steaming to the scene, one of them a missile tracking ship with a helicopter. Soviet ships have been nearby during earlier U.S. splash-downs.

Police Report

Police on routine patrol discovered a broken door glass at Beverly's Restaurant, 1705 West Broadway, at 11:11 p.m. Wednesday. The investigating officers noted that someone apparently kicked the glass out. Entry to the building was not gained.

Howard Price, Bothwell Hotel, reported vandals punctured two tires on his car while it was parked in the hotel lot Wednesday night. Damage was estimated at $60.

M. McNight, 906 South Sneed, reported vandals broke the antenna on his truck sometime Wednesday afternoon.

William Washington, 213 West Morgan, reported the theft of several tools and a television set, all valued at $253, to the Sedalia police at 11:05 a.m. Thursday.

Washington stated in the report that the theft had taken place sometime between Wednesday and Thursday at a garage at the above address where a lock had been removed from a door to gain entry.

Roy Jones, 50, 1216 South Sneed, reported to Sedalia police at 7:05 p.m. Thursday that sometime between Wednesday evening and Thursday morning someone had damaged an antenna on his automobile while it was parked at the above address.

Circuit Court

A $100,000 two-count damage suit was filed in Pettis County Circuit Court Wednesday by Betty Sue and Joseph F. Frey, Jr.

Named as the defendant in the suit was James R. McKenzie.

The suit stemmed from an auto accident two-tenths of a mile west of Dresden on Highway 50 on Feb. 24.

Count I of the petition seeks $75,000 in damages for injuries sustained by Mrs. Frey in the accident. In Count II of the petition, Frey is seeking $25,000 in damages for medical bills sustained by him and his wife.

The One and Future Supremes

Diana Ross and the Supremes will make one of their last public appearances at 7 p.m. Monday night on Channels 3, 4, and 8 in a re-run of "TCB—Taking Care of Business." The long popular quartet are pictured above (left to right): Cindy Birdsong, Mary Wilson, Jean Terrell, and Diana Ross.

Diana Ross Leaves The Supremes; But The Popular Singing Group Will Try To Keep Long-time Bookings Filled

By ROGER DOUGHTY

FREEPORT, Grand Bahama Island — (NEA) — When Berry Gordy Jr. picked Freeport as the locale for chapter one of "The Selling of the Supremes, 1970," he knew what he was doing. He always does.

Freeport isn't the kind of place where you'd expect to run into anything very Supreme, let alone the Supremes, since the only things really supreme about the island are the conch chowder (Bahamian soul food) and the golf courses, of which there are many. Naturally, the Supremes were a big attraction when they showed up.

There are those who say that "The Selling of the Supremes, 1970," should be subtitled "How to Avoid Probate While Letting Diana Ross Do Her Own Thing," but Gordy, the black Horatio Alger of the record business (he owns Motown, four other labels and a lot of other things) disagrees.

"The girls are booked solid for the next three or four years," he says, so you figure there's not much chance they'll cause any embarrassment to Labor Secretary Shultz (or Gordy) when he figures out the unemployment statistics.

"What you have to remember," Gordy was saying, "is that you're taking an occasional swipe at an imaginary golf ball, "is that most of these bookings were lined up before Diana split the group. Now we have to start working on the three or four years that come after that."

The scene of all this sparkling dialogue was a villa at the King's Inn where the Dianaless Supremes were breaking in their new act, which just happens to sound a lot like their old act.

Jean Terrell, Diana's replacement, was sitting there, right in the middle of things, with Mary Wilson, the only original Supreme still around, on her right and Cindy Birdsong split wide to the left, sort of hiding behind a big bowl of flowers.

Jean used to sing with her brother, Ernie Terrell, who alternated between picking his guitar and punching people in the prize ring as a heavyweight championship contender.

She seems very sure of herself.

"Mary and Cindy have a lot to do with my confidence," she claimed. "They don't have any in me, so I have to make up for it by having enough for three people."

What is that Supreme quality?

Mary couldn't define it.

Gordy could.

"There are winners and there are losers," he observed.

Newsman Gives Ideas For Critics

RADNOR, Pa. — A veteran television news executive today suggested a set of rules viewers should observe before they complain to station news departments and demand "equal time" coverage.

Richard Graf, news director of a New York station, writing in TV Guide (April 11 issue), said he created the rules after receiving many letters over the years with words like "biased, slanted, arrogant, nit-picking and un-American."

Here are Graf's Rules for TV news viewers:

1. Television news isn't anything like newspapers, so stop making comparisons.
2. It isn't anything like magazines or books, either.
3. We're professionals in a difficult trade. We're not press agents for the established order of things.
4. If you're going to criticize television news, you have to watch it regularly.
5. When you do, pay attention.
6. If you're going to criticize us, do it for what we are, not for what you think we should be.

Graf said 10 years in television news, the last two as a news director, has taught him that viewers often are not hesitant to speak up when they are unhappy with news coverage. "Much of it is thoughtful, reflecting the concerns of people who become upset at what they see — or what they think they see — on the television screen. All of it is interesting," Graf writes.
